UNEMPLOYMENT RELIEF AGENT IN CITY TODAY

Representative of Hoover Organization Studies Local Situation.

TO SPEAK AT MEETING

Will Address Welfare Workers at Y. M. C. A. Tonight; Public Invited.

The services of a student of welfare problems and a representative of President Hoover's organization on unemployment relief were made available to leaders of public and private welfare and relief groups and public officials today when Ellwood Street, director of the Community Chest of Washington, D. C., arrived in Marion to be interviewed by local welfare workers.

After conferring with workers this afternoon to assist in solving local problems, Mr. Street is to address a public meeting at the Y. M. C. A. tonight at 7:30. The meeting is open to anyone interested in welfare work.

Mr. Street was interviewed by heads of a number of local relief groups at his temporary headquarters in The Marion Star building this afternoon.

As field director of a region embracing Ohio and Michigan in the nationwide welfare and relief mobilization, Mr. Street is now concluding his visit to Ohio cities having Community funds or chests to help community welfare leaders and public officials in formulating plans to meet the needs of the coming winter.

Local Task, He Believes

Before he had been given opportunity to become acquainted with Marion's welfare situation, Mr. Street, in an interview at Hotel Harding this morning, said his survey of other Ohio cities had made it evident that meeting the relief situation should be a local proposition, and that the plan of the national and state welfare committees is to help each community solve its own particular problems rather than administer relief through state and national channels.

He advocated wholehearted cooperation on the part of public and private relief agencies in meeting needs during the coming winter, which he predicted would be unusually severe. County, city, and township officials and private charity organizations must cooperate to stretch available resources, he said.

The importance of having a skilled worker determine where the need is the greatest before relief money is distributed was also pointed out by Mr. Street.

Urges Cooperation

It is important that both public officials and private citizens develop the work resources to assist in meeting the winter's needs, he continued. Every possible method to stimulate work and to keep as many persons employed as possible was urged by Mr. Street.

Notified that Marion voters were to ballot on a one-mill levy Nov. 3, the welfare worker declared that its passage is essential if the local problem is to be solved. He also indorsed action of the city and county in issuing Pringle-Roberts bonds for poor relief.

Mr. Street will leave Marion early Wednesday to continue his tour of Ohio and Michigan cities.

PROPOSAL OFFERED BY KENTON CITIZEN

Would Have State Constitution Give Electors Control Over Expenditures.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 13—A petition for a constitutional amendment, designed to give control of all public expenditures to the electors, was submitted to the secretary of state today by C. E. Wharton, Democrat of Kenton. Wharton was a candidate for the United States senatorial nomination in 1928.

The proposed amendment would grant to the electors, through referendum, control of expenditures of funds by local political subdivisions and the state. The electors would have the power to increase or decrease the salaries of any public employes; could abolish any public position; could curtail or abolish any specific expenditure or any law fixing a price; and could abolish any item in a current budget.

AKRON ALOFT FOR 8TH TIME TODAY

By The Associated Press.

AKRON, O., Oct. 13—Up to its best speed for the first time, the U. S. S. Akron went aloft on her eighth flight at 6:00 a. m. today. The huge air cruiser headed in the direction of Cleveland.

The airship, with more than 36 hours in the air to her credit, was expected to cruise most of the day and make a number of speed runs.

Today's flight will probably surpass the work which Commander Rosendahl accomplished on the ship's last flight when she was in the air 56 hours 13 minutes before she came to a mooring mast.

BANDIT GANG IN DARING RAID

Gunmen Take Possession of Lizton, Ind., Looting Bank of $3,500.

PHONE LINES SEVERED

Citizens Held at Bay as Desperadoes Wreck Safe with Nitro.

By United Press.

LIZTON, Ind., Oct. 13—Two automobile loads of bandits took possession of Lizton for one and one-half hours today and then escaped with $3,500 from the Liztop state bank.

The bandits severed all telephone and telegraph wires into the town, barricaded themselves in the bank, and wrecked its interior with eight charges of nitroglycerine, then fired half a dozen shots at Marion Bailey, president of the institution, while retreating.

Bailey's home is across the street from the bank. He was in bed asleep when the first explosion shook the town. The blast awakened him and he ran to the window of his room and looked out.

Barricaded Doors

"I saw two men inside the door of the bank," he said. "Both were armed and they were crouched behind desks and chairs which they had piled up between themselves and the door as a barricade."

Bailey seized a shotgun and opened fire at the bandits. They returned his shots, their bullets penetrating the walls of his bedroom, but missing him. None of Bailey's firing took effect.

"A moment later I heard another explosion inside the bank," said Bailey. "This was followed by still others, several occurring in rapid succession. I believe there were eight or nine in all."

Their work completed, the bandits escaped in a waiting automobile.

EDISON SLOWLY GROWING WEAKER

By The Associated Press.

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Oct. 13—Thomas A. Edison continued to cling to the straining thread of life today but his personal physician reported that while his general condition remained unchanged the aged inventor was experiencing a "gradually progressive enfeeblement."

Dr. Hubert S. Howe, the inventor's physician, said today, the "wizard's" resistance to the complication of diseases from which he suffers has been "amazing."

"His heart action is good," said Dr. Howe, "but he is definitely failing, day by day."

Six teaspoonfuls of skimmed milk was the only nourishment the dying man could take yesterday. Mr. Edison failed yesterday for the first time during his illness to recognize his wife.

SCHOOL PRESENTS DRAMA OF KITCHEN

The Star's Seventh Culinary Course Opens Today; Edna Ferguson Lecturer.

The stage of The Star auditorium presented the setting for a drama of the kitchen, at the opening of The Star's seventh annual cooking school, this afternoon at 2 p. m.

The most modern of cooking equipment, from the smallest measuring spoons to an electric stove, all decorated in cool green and white enamel, and a compact kitchen cabinet in green which saves a housewife a thousand steps a day, brought a delightful gleam to the eyes of the housewives who filled the auditorium.

Edna Ferguson, lecturer and demonstrator, is a believer in the cheer which flowers can bring to a kitchen, and on her mixing table was a small bowl of bright straw flowers, a colorful little spot in the sunshine.

As she lectured, stirring, mixing, folding, basting, she gave many most interesting household hints which the women were quick to copy their notebooks.

In front of the stage, a dining room suite has been placed, and each day will be set for a meal, beginning with a breakfast today, luncheon on Wednesday, formal dinner on Thursday, and a party on Friday.

The nursery, enlarged this year,

Mrs. Carroll D. Conard of Mt. Vernon, president of Central district presided for the session this morning which was given over to a club institute conducted by Mrs. Earl B. Padgett of Galion, state institute chairman. Informal discussion of club work and activities occupied practically the entire morning. A talk on the work of the adult blind in the state by Mrs. G. R. Horner of Columbus, state chairman, closed the morning session.

Mrs. Horner told of the help the club women of the state had been in this work through the sponsoring of sales and stated that the individual club sales had been doubled during the last year through the cooperation of the county chairmen.

More than 300 club sales were held during the year and sales amounted to $10,000, Mrs. Horner stated. The women were doing a form of welfare work she said, by helping others to help themselves. More than 60,000 jam towels were made by the blind of the state during the year. Their work also included the making of 30,000 pot cloths and 2,000 bedspreads, she said. (Copyright, 1931, by International News Service.)

MUKDEN, MANCHURIA, Oct. 13—An exciting movement of Japanese troops, officially described by the Japanese authorities here as an "anti-bandit" crusade, was launched today with Chinchow, headquarters of Governor Chang Hsueh-Liang, as its objective.

The city of Koupengtse is expected to fall within the next few days. Fighting occurred on its outskirts this morning, according to reports received here, with soldiers aboard a Chinese troop train firing on Japanese airplanes and the planes responding with a futile bomb attack.

CHINA ANSWERS DEMAND

Tells Japan Occupations Constitute State of War.

By The Associated Press.

NANKING, Oct. 13—Pending action by the League of Nations council in the Sino-Japanese dispute, China today answered the Tokyo government's recent demand for the suppression of anti-Japanese demonstrations in this country. High official quarters disclosed that the Chinese reply reiterated that the Japanese invasion of southern Manchuria was in violation of international agreements and would contend the occupation constituted a state of war.

The seriousness with which Washington and London view the crisis is expected to bring American Minister Nelson T. Johnson and British Minister Sir Miles Lampson from Peiping to Nanking in the next two days.

Widow Fumes as Kin Seek To Control Hoard

NEW YORK, Oct. 13—An old lady's kin vied at law today for control of her gold.

The old lady herself—Mrs. Ida Wood—fretted and fumed in her new hotel apartment while her stepgranddaughter, Mrs. Blanche Wood Shields challenged the guardianship now exercised over Mrs. Wood by the latter's nephew.

It was from the folds of Mrs. Wood's old-fashioned frocks that there tumbled last week a Midas miracle of nearly one million dollars in currency.

Mrs. Shields seeks to have the nephew, Otis Wood, removed as guardian. She contends that force was used to take the money from Mrs. Wood, and that Mrs. Wood had been treated poorly.

"I talked with her," Mrs. Shields said. "And she told me they had taken her money away from her."

CRISIS FACED BY BRUENING

Opposition Masses Strength Today in Effort To Overthrow Regime.

FATE HANGS IN BALANCE

Reichstag Convenes with Future of Germany Hinging on Action.

By The Associated Press.

BERLIN, Oct. 13—The life of moderate government in Germany swung in the balance today with the opening of the Reichstag for its first session since March.

Chancellor Bruening faced the entrenched Nationalist opposition with a review of the activities of his first cabinet, recently resigned, and an outline of his program for the future, seeking to win support for a critical vote of confidence on Friday.

Nationalist Socialist deputies in the number of 107 and 41 Nationalists, all of whom walked out of the chamber last February, were back with the sole purpose of overturning the Bruening regime and replacing it with a belligerent Rightist government.

Four Motions Offered

They had four motions on the agenda, namely, (1) to withdraw confidence from the government, (2) request President Von Hindenburg to dissolve the Reichstag and call elections for Nov. 8, (3) declare void all emergency decrees issued since Oct. 2, and (4), terminate the Reich's subsidy of the Prussian police.

The chancellor was assured 93 votes from the Centrists, the state party, People's party and Conservative party and was confident of 127 more from the Socialists.

He was backed to the limit by General Wilhelm Groener, new commander of Germany's military forces as minister of the interior and of defense, who issued a statement of policy which was interpreted as an answer to the threats of Adolf Hitler and Alfred Hugenberg in the Nationalist meeting Sunday.

In talking over his new duties, General Groener said:

HOOVER IS HOPEFUL

Tells Cabinet News Indicates Partial Clearing of War Clouds.

By The Associated Press.

Spokesmen for China and Japan have presented their cases before the League of Nations council meeting in extraordinary session to restore peace in Manchuria.

China demanded intervention by the league to avert "unhappy results." Japan insisted on direct negotiations with China, and disavowed responsibility for the Manchurian trouble.

Martial law was declared at Canton as Communists took advantage of anti-Japanese demonstrations, and at Hankow and elsewhere Japanese nationals were moving out in the face of hostile demonstrations.

In Washington President Hoover submitted to the cabinet reports which were said to indicate that efforts of the league and other interested parties were having fruit.

Mr. Hoover had at hand reports from American observers both in Manchuria and at Geneva. One official said that they indicated "there are rifts in the clouds which have gathered over Manchuria. I believe that daylight is getting in."

LEAGUE COUNCIL MEETS

Chinese Delegate First To Address Peace Conclave.

By The Associated Press.

GENEVA, Oct. 13—The League of Nations council convened in extraordinary session today to consider the Sino-Japanese conflict in Manchuria, listened to a statement by Dr. Alfred Sze, the Chinese delegate, and adjourned until this afternoon.

Dr. Sze, asserting that the hope for world disarmament depends upon the league's action here, denounced Japan's "violence and military aggression" and demanded that the league direct immediate withdrawal of Japanese troops from Manchuria.

He invoked the League of Nations covenant and the Kellogg pact as "cornerstones of world peace," and asserted that China has lived up to the principles of the league under "terrible provocations."

Urges Such Action

He emphasized that quick action is essential if "most unhappy results" are to be avoided.

While he spoke the diminutive Kenkichi Yoshizawa, Japan's representative, sat impassively on the other side of the council table. He will be heard this afternoon.

"When our territory was suddenly invaded on a vast scale, our towns laid waste and our peaceful citizens done to death, what was our reply?" asked Dr. Sze.

The reply, he said, was in the form of three executive proclamations calling on the Chinese to remain calm and await the league's action.

Noted Aviatrix Is Speaker at Meeting of University Women

WHEN housekeeping duties palled, Mrs. Blanche Wilcox Noyes took to the air. In an interesting and at times humorous manner, the noted aviatrix from Cleveland addressed the Marion Association of University Women at a dinner meeting last evening at Klinger's inn. Thirty-four members were seated for dinner.

Mrs. Noyes, one of the two women in the United States who are flying autogyros, and who placed fourth in the 1929 Cleveland Air derby, presented a charming appearance last evening.

Her formal evening gown was of pale blue taffeta and tulle, tucked in puffs to the floor. With this she wore an evening cap of the taffeta and tulle, and a shoulder corsage.

The greater part of her talk dealt with her experience in the 1929 derby in which she flew a 220 horsepower plane for the first time. Mrs. Noyes has been married three years to Dewey Noyes, who is in the United States air service. Shortly after their marriage she became lonesome at home and to be near her husband she had to learn to fly. Mr. Noyes bought her a 90 horsepower machine and she flew for six months before entering the Cleveland air derby.

A plane was ordered for her for the derby, and her first glimpse of the plane was at Wichita, Kas., a week before the derby started.

Mrs Noyes told of the harrowing experiences she encountered in the derby, first of a dead-stick landing she was forced to make at Santa Monica Solder left in the gas line when the ship was hurriedly assembled, caused the engine to miss, and her friends tried to discourage her in keeping on with the flight.

She admitted that she was "scared to death" all the way across the continent. In speaking of her landing at the San Bernardino airport, she complimented the Marion airport by saying that it looked like a million dollars compared to the San Bernardino airport when she saw it in the 1929 derby.

After flying across a mountain to make better time, landing in Sonora, Mex., in territory in which foreign planes were confiscated and getting away in the nick of time, and of having a fire started in her baggage while flying near Pecos, Tex., she told of the thrill of arriving in Cleveland, in fourth place in the derby.

This year Mrs. Noyes entered the derby but didn't make any record "I enjoyed more than anything the friendship I made in this year's derby," she added.

She has had 125 hours in autogyro flying, and in her opinion, the autogyro will never be an accepted mode of transportation.

Miss Lucile Foreman, president of the club, presided last evening and following Mrs. Noyes' talk, announced the club committees for the year. They follow:

Program, Mrs. Kenneth D. Smith, Mrs. Earl T. Smart, Miss Nell Freer, Miss Dorothy Strellitz, Miss Pansy Rauhauser; membership, Miss Ruby Cramer, Mrs. Merle Hamilton, Mrs. Frank Barnhill; finance, Mrs. E. Paul Bachman, Mrs. Howard Geer, Miss Isabelle Stump; scholarship, Miss Mabel Turney, Miss Isabel Freer, Miss Winona Hughes.

Clarence Sullivan of the Sullivan Costume Co. in Columbus will speak to the club on Nov. 9 on the subject, "The Passing of Yesterday's Theater." The meeting will be at Miss Foreman's home on east Church street.

Personal Mention

Miss Dorothy May Cronenwett, who has made her home with Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Hill of 217 west Church for the last several years, left Monday for Roseburg, Ore., to join her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. H Cronenwett, who live near there.

New Elegance at Teatime in Richly Bedecked Coats

By DIANA MERWIN
(Associated Press Fashion Editor)

PARIS.—The dressy coats, hats and shoes which women will wear with their teatime frocks this fall are more elegant than they have been in the last decade.

In keeping with the "grand dame" mode, which smart Parisians have adopted for the cocktail hour, coats are designed of rich fabrics decked in luxurious furs.

Shoes Spike Heeled

Shoes are dainty spike heeled sandals of faille or dull kid in black or a color matching the coat, while chapeaux are of velvet or felt decked with a plume, a wing or uprightly bow falling over the hair.

Black is the favorite teatime coat color, although a new putty beige and deep reds, greens and purples, so dark they are almost black, are offered to color the mode.

Ermine, once reserved for the robes of queens, is one of the smartest furs.

Black broadcloth coats with swirling ermine collars and melon cuffs are the fashionable Parisian's favorite teatime wraps.

Smooth black wools trimmed in white galyak, mink or black broadtail are another variation of the mode.

Velveteen Coats New

Velveteen coats are a new fall offering for the woman who likes to be different. Steel grey velveteens trimmed in black seal and putty-beige velvets decked with silver fox are designed for the picturesque woman.

A black-green velvet wrap collared in glistening coq feathers instead of fur is displayed for the woman of eccentric taste

Most of the formal daytime coats are designed with a slightly fitted waistline, although many models follow a straight line; collars roll high around the face, while cuffs often extend to the elbow.

The hose worn with teatime outfits are sheer and dark, while gloves of suede of kid match the color of the coat fabric or fur soft, trustful, grave not quite happy eyes pencilled by short dark lashes that stood out separately as though waxed; a small, chaste mouth somehow pathetic in its immaturity and droop. An open, innocent sort of face, a face that spelled no guile, no allure no mystery. Just a wistful girl, unsure of things and unable to pretend.

It was here that she realized and resented the purity of her look. I should have a lily in my hand and a fillet of pearls in my hair. She smiled wryly at the absurdity of such a picture in a day of Epstein and Eckener and Rudy Vallee. Her sense of humor often came at such moments to pierce her most gloomy speculations. And my neck's too long and thin. She raised her head to exaggerate its slenderness But I'm too thin all over for that matter It's lucky I'm not very tall.

She sighed

But it isn't really my looks. They're average. I'm not flippant enough, not gay enough. And no one's interested these days in the type of girl I really am. At least no one who gads about and enjoys what the papers call society. And mother won't let me out of the social groove. Oh, God

She went to throw herself on the chaise lounge again Bitterness assailed her. Her mind leaped to paint a picture of herself at the Goadbys' party. Trying so hard to be pleasant, watching herself fail flat. The consciousness of her own failure. If only she weren't so sensitive, didn't realize herself what a dud she was Isn't that what they called those shells that were tossed forth and never exploded? A dud It exactly described her. No She had started to pull off a stocking when the door slowly opened.

"Are you wearing your new dress tonight, dear?"

"I'm not going, Mother"

"Of course you're going What's the matter, Venice? Aren't you well?"

Mrs Muir stood just inside the doorway, a large aristocratic woman, white haired, beautifully corseted, beautifully groomed. Her face was clear-cut like a cameo, meaningless and charming It had been so thoroughly schooled in the social graces that one felt its smiles were taken on and off regardless of the emotion behind them. Like something kept in a reticule to be hastily donned or discarded at other people's pleasure. She spoke with a slight trace of Southern softness. She was proud of having been a Lee from Virginia. Family tree was her gauge, money merely the fertilizer that made it flourish. She condescended to be a leader of society in New York, but in spite of the condescension she earnestly longed to have her daughter a younger leader in that glowing, superficial, indifferent sphere.

Venice sat with a sheer stocking in one hand and that look of misery in her eyes which annoyed her mother so frequently.

"No, I feel all right," she said. "But it's the same old thing Why should I go? I never have a good time."

"It's your own fault. Why shouldn't you have a good time? You're unusual looking, you have pretty clothes and a pretty figure."

"I have no small talk, Mother. I'm not gay and carefree like most of the girls in circulation. I—I—don't know what it is."

I'm like a box, she thought, whose lid invariably sticks at inopportune moments. I never can open it quickly enough to show the entertaining things inside.

"You must cultivate small talk, vivacity."

"It's not natural to me, Mother"

"Then affect it. Come along, Venice Put on those new brocaded slippers and the yellow dress."

There was a silent battle. Mrs. Muir won

Venice got reluctantly to her feet. Twenty minutes later she stood before the dressing-table, a slim, supple young figure in long tight-fitting honey-colored satin, jade at her ears and throat. Her russet hair gleamed lustrous as the satin of her frock. The pallor of her face was as startling as the flesh tints of certain old masters. It belonged to an aesthetic age. Venice turned slowly before the mirror

"My dress should be cut to the waist in back," she said "Its not being cut quite low enough spoils all the smartness"

"Nonsense, my dear Do you want to ape the musical comedy stage?"

"Why not? The stage gets its clothes from the best French dressmakers Most of the girls we know have their necks cut daringly."

"They need sensational touches to commend them. You have your breeding"

Venice reflected that a young man at a dance did not pursue you for your family tree.

"You look lovely, dear," said Mrs. Muir. She went and kissed her She never meant to be unkind It was all for Venice's good.

Venice, discreetly followed by Nora, climbed forlornly into a taxi The maid was to be left at the Goadbys' front door.

It was a big stone house in the east Seventies. Lights glowed warmly from behind every shaded window and a line of cars stood along the curb outside A butler admitted her to a wave of warm, scented air

Venice climbed the broad stairway to leave her wrap with innumerable others in Lois Goadby's room. Her eye caught with quick pleasure the lovely mass of color tumbled brocade and velvet and fur made on the bed. Ruby and jade and ebony, silver and bronze and gold. She re-powdered her nose, gave herself another pencilling of lipstick and then went reluctantly down the stairs She stood nervously at the foot, staring into the big room where the dancing was in gay and noisy sway.

"Hello Venice."

It was Jerry Ward, one of the young men who had always been courteous in passing.

"Hello," echoed Venice Here's my chance, she thought, to say something amusing that will make him want to stay. "I—I—"

He was gone

She took a tentative step nearer the ballroom. Couples footrotted by. One or two waved to her. Color crept into her face at the poised embarrassment of this standing alone. Suddenly Lois Goadby saw her. With the exception of Nolly Spalding, Lois was Venice's only really intimate friend. She was blonde, snub-nosed, brown-eyed, eager, effervescent. She broke from her partner's dancing and, dragging him by the hand threaded her way to Venice.

"Hello, darling. You're late."

"I know. . I almost didn't come."

"Same old reason, I suppose. Well, not at my party, Venice. This is Miss Muir, Mr. Reese." Lois deliberately went away and left them together.

CHAPTER 2

Technique of Popularity

"HOW-DO-YOU-DO," said Venice, holding out a hand. She had a firm, strong clasp like a boy's that was always surprising people. It didn't belong to a slim girl with fragile skin and soft, grave eyes.

He was a handsome youth. Black pomaded hair, black as a parent heather stood cap upon his head; laughing brown eyes; weak, pretty mouth.

"Ah." he smiled, shaking her hand and not noticing that surprising grip of hers "you have a lover in the offing who detains you."

"No, I didn't want to come and my mother made me." Why had she said that? It was so flat and uncompromising and final. "What for?" she asked desperately.

Although tardy, it worked. The "what for" made the young man think it had been an artful fib.

"Let's dance," he said and Venice slipped out on to the floor with him.

She danced well. He did not apparently want to talk so she happily gave herself up to the rhythm and they glided to and fro, this way and that together. The music stopped. Venice looked anxiously about. Was young Reese going to be stuck with her? This fear made her tongue-tied.

"Do you like to read?" finally managed.

They started dancing again. She loved to read. If some one would talk books to her she could be conversational all night.

"Not in the evenings," he said.

Here was her chance for humorous repartee. She couldn't. Nothing amusing would come into her head. Silence.

"You dance well," he murmured.

"Thank you," said Venice.

Again silence It pressed down on her as heavily as a tangible weight. Around and around. Partnerless men came out from their line and danced with other girls. Venice and young Reese went on and on. She began to dance badly through her misery. She could not concentrate on dancing when she was trying to concentrate on a tactful manner of helping him to be rid of her. I can go to the dressing room, she thought. The dance seemed endless.

"Here you are. "It was Lois interrupting with a new young man. "This is Miss Muir, Mr. Parker. You know Donny Reese, Ted."

Venice went off in the arms of Mr. Parker. He was a fat and perspiring youth who blew in her ear as they danced and pumped her arm up and down like some lever of steady rotation. She could feel her hair at one side getting mussed. It irritated her. But still he was a new partner. Wallflowers cannot be choosers. The saxophone growing positively dissolute in its rivalry. It's laughing at me, went her thoughts. And then she saw an old gentleman who was a friend of her mother. She gave him her brightest smile. Could she have but realized, it was the sort of smile she should have been offering all the younger men. It warmedq her face like a lamp suddenly lit from within. The gray eyes unexpectedly lost their limpidity, the mournful little mouth went up at the corners.

"Will you dance with an octogenarian, Venice?"

"No, but I'll dance with you, Mr. Partridge."

Why couldn't she say things like that to her contemporaries? Perhaps they made her shy. Whatever it was, she felt awkward when it came to looking into their eyes or up into their faces as other girls did It made her self-conscious, strangely ill at ease. She felt they knew her lack, mentally criticised her. Older men took her for what she was worth

Mr. Partridge took her to an adjoining room for some punch and they sat in a bay window laughing and chatting Venice began to have a lovely time. This was no effort. This was simply being herself. Mr Partridge had read Cakes and Ale and liked it as much as she did. She thought Louis Bromfield's 24 Hours ought to get the Pulitzer prize. He disagreed. They had a spirited and stimulating argument.

Lois wandered up with Jerry Ward and joined them on the broad window seat. The punch helped It gave her the courage to momentarily rest a careless hand on Jerry's arm the way Lois did and to lean across Mr. Partridge to look him in the eyes without remembering to feel foolish She managed two funny stories. She forgot to wonder if Jerry was mentally examining her. She was about to have her glass refilled when he asked her to dance.

It was too bad. The warm glory was not firmly enough established within her It faded quickly and she and Jerry were going around and around indefinitely. She became a nervous automaton again desperately hoping to capture another partner. Her eyes slid analytically about the room examining this girl and that, in an effort to discover how they did it. Beatrix Haskell's head was pressed tight against her partner's shoulder, her eyes closed No man had ever looked so soulfully contented when dancing with Venice. Doris Norton was laughing up into her young man's face with a merry sort of abandon Before the laugh had faded on her lips another partner had claimed her. Alice Schuyler was whispering as she danced. Betty Paine was melted into her partner. They appeared as one form swaying slowly, tensely. Some one came to pry them loose Immediately Betty was fused into another dinner jacket with all the closeness and intimacy of the first. Half around the room and another young man demanded her.

But I couldn't dance like that, thought Venice. I'd die of embarrassment if I tried She suddenly attempted to press herself closer to Jerry and raised her face to his with that secret look of Alice Schuyler's.

To Be Continued.

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Humorous Boyhood Adventure

By JOHN SCHUYLER LEWIS

TUESDAY. It was cooler than ever when me and Jubilee woke up this morning, and I let Jubilee down and shut the window so I wouldn't freeze before I got my short britches on. It isn't as cold as it will be, but it is colder than it was in vacation. When I had went down and fed the base-burner and went out to the barn to milk the dumened brutes and the bunch began to show up Red came and he was good and sore about making an Indian out of his kid brother. He said his mother had to wash him with gasoline and then she had to rub him with goose grease so the gasoline wouldn't burn him, and he said that none of us had better come around his house again for a long time.

I told him we didn't want to. We don't have to go around to pie house; we have got lots of places better than that to go to. And when he asked me what places I meant I told him about the stink factory and the slaughter house and a lot of places. Then I asted him if I couldn't go around his house what was he hanging around my house for, and he said all right, if I felt that way about it he wouldn't hang around our house any more, and his lip was hanging down like he was going to cry, and he started to go and I bent up one of the cow's handles and snuffled him one in the ear, and he looked at me and I was grinning, so then he knew I was only fooling and he gave me a rush that knocked me off the milk stool and everybody hollered so he knew it was all right; and when I went in the house to strain the milk he said he had forgot something and would meet us at the vacant lot when we went to get the cows to take them to the pasture.

I was glad he wasn't feeling bad any more. I think his mother ought to of been proud of the way we fixed Red's kid brother, the more paint that is put on him the better he looks. But grown-ups are funny, anyhow a woman. She paints her face till she looks more like an Indian than an Indian does, but when a fella puts paint on her little boy she gets mad.

It was a coolish morning, so we took Bunt and went around to see Gimmie and her mother before we went to school, and we went in because she likes to have us, and she is always playing tricks herself so she don't mind them. We stood Bunt in the kitchen by the stove and then we went in the other room, and she said she had heard that little boys were all fond of monkeys, and we all began to tell about things we had seen monkeys do, and she asked us if we would like to see a whole bunch of monkys, and we all began to tell would she took us in the big front room and had us look in a big looking glass, and we all seen the joke was on us and we made faces and scratched our fleas and made her laugh, and then we went back in the other room and Bunt had got warmed up. His father works in the stink factory and he was smelling strong.

CHAPTER 41

Peak Tries An Arrangement

"DON'T be silly, Sam!" There was a husky note in Peak's voice. "I've wanted you so long, and so desperately, that it's nearly torn me in two. I still want you. I want you more than ever."

"You mean it? You really mean it?" She suddenly put her face in her hands. "I was terribly afraid you might have changed."

Peak said gruffly: "Don't cry"

She shook her head "I'm not crying Im happy."

"Tell me something, Sam" said Peak gently. "Tell me why you want to marry me."

"Oh!" She looked up at him then, and her eyes filled suddenly with tears "You mustn't think that—I won't let you! I won't let you think that I want you for what you have!"

"Of course you don't." He shook his head impatiently. "I didn't mean that. It's just that I can't see how you can possibly care for me, I tricked you."

"Oh, that!" She was startled. "Haven't you seen Fredy Munson" Didn't he tell you that he'd been down here—that he had explained?"

"Never mind about Freddy. I want to know exactly what you thought when you heard about Fourth's invention, and why you wrote me that letter."

"Must I tell you that?" She shivered.

"Tell me," he insisted gently.

"All right." She drew a long breath "It seems incredible that I should have so little faith in you. You've always been wonderful to me, and I must have been crazy to think what I did when I heard about Fourth's invention."

"What did you think?"

She spoke in a small, strained voice "I thought that you had—I thought that you were trying to—"

"You thought that I was trying to buy you with my money, is that it?"

"Yes." She put out a pleading hand "Please don't hate me, Peak It was a terrible thing to think. I was dazed, and I stayed dazed until Freddy told me the real answer."

"Wait a minute. Let me get this straight." His tone was almost impersonal "You thought that I was trying to buy you, and that was the reason you wrote me that letter and came down here."

"Yes"

"You despised me, and you'd have gone on despising me to the end of time, if it hadn't been for Freddy Munson."

"Yes. Freddy came down here to see me. He told me—"

"I know what Freddy told you I know all about it."

Sam stared at him in complete astonishment. "You do?"

"Yes Freddy came in to see me after he got back to the city He gave me the whole story."

"He did?" She gasped. "Then you knew all about it! Then there wasn't any need for my telling you all this!"

"There was every need, Sam There was every need in the world."

"Why?"

The lines seemed to have become deeper about Peak's mouth. He shrugged. "Because I had to know just how you felt toward me before Freddy explained You've told me, and I know."

"But what difference does that make? I don't feel that way any more. It's all forgotten. What are you trying to get at, Peak?"

"I'm trying to say, Sam, that Freddy's version of my motives in the invention deal is entirely incorrect. It was decent of him to think of that version, and more than decent of him to tell you what he thought—but at the same time, he was wrong I didn't give Fourth the money so that you'd be free to marry Munson. Not at all"

"You didn't?" She was bewildered. "But then why—?"

"I'll tell you why." He nodded grimly. "I gave Fourth the money for precisely the reason you thought in the beginning.. I was trying to buy you."

She stared. Then she shook her head calmly. "I don't believe it."

"I'm glad you don't. I wish I didn't, myself. The fact remains, however, that it's true. Freddy Munson told me that you were in love with him, and asked me to release you from your engagement to me. I wouldn't do it. Instead, I gave you money in the hope that it might make you see things differently. Just as you thought in the beginning, I tried to buy you."

Sam was silent for a time. Then she said in a tired, choked voice: "Why did you have to tell me this. Peak? Why did you have to say it? I was so—happy."

"I'm sorry. I couldn't help it." He did not move or glance in her direction "I deceived you once, and I'm not going to do it again. You know everything now. You know that you were right when you despised me in the first place. You know that you will be right in despising me from now on. You know why I didn't react as you expected when you offered to marry me just now You know everything."

He got to his feet and wandered down to the water's edge, where he stood kicking at the sand with the toe of his shoe. Sam did not stir. She sat where she was with her eyes closed until Peak returned.

"I think we'd better be going," he said quietly, looking down at her "It's getting late."

"Sit down," said Sam. "Please sit down"

He sat down. "Well?"

Sam said: "Are you going back to the city tonight?"

"Yes"

"I wish you wouldn't. I wish you'd stay—with me"

"You want me to stay? With you?" It was Peak's turn for astonishment. "Why?"

Sam opened her eyes and smiled. "Because I want you to stay. Because, Mr. Abbott, I love you. That's why. Is it enough?"

Peak shook his head as if to throw off the effects of a blow. He clinched his fists. He said unevenly, "You don't mean that, Sam. You don't know what you're saying!"

"You think not?" she inquired calmly. "You're wrong. I know exactly what I'm saying. For the second time this afternoon I'm asking you to marry me. How about it?"

Peak stared vaguely about him at the warm April landscape. "I wonder," he inquired heavily, "if you understand a word of what I've been trying to say for the last half hour? Do you realize that I've been giving you every reason to distrust, dislike, and even hate me?"

"Yes"

"Do you believe what I've been saying? You must!"

"All right. Will you marry me, or won't you?"

Peak groaned "I've deceived you and made you unhappy, and destroyed your belief, and yet you're asking me to marry you"

"Yes"

"But it doesn't make sense"

"I know." She smiled. "I know exactly what you mean. When you were down there by the water just now I told myself that I hated you; that I had every reason for hating you, that I wanted you to go away and never come back." She shrugged. "Then, all at once, I realized that I was lying to myself. I don't want you to go away. I want you to stay. I'll admit that it doesn't make sense, but what of it? Freddy Munson likes to say that reasons aren't important—only facts. He's absolutely right"

Peak pulled himself to his feet and stood looking down at her. "Look here," he said roughly, "just let me have this once again. Do you mean that you're willing to forget what I've done to you? That you don't care?"

"Yes, I'm willing to forget, and I don't care. As a matter of fact, I don't care if you smoke opium and rob banks. That's the state I'm in."

"And you're ready to marry me tomorrow?"

"Tomorrow?" She frowned. "What's the matter with tonight? Don't you think you could arrange it for tonight?"

His voice was husky. "I can try."

"That's good." She looked up at him. "And now? Don't you think you could arrange to kiss me—at least once?"

He sat down on the sand beside her and looked into her eyes. They were wide and dark. "I can try," he said softly, taking both her hands. "I most certainly can try."

Ingrown Nail Turns Right Out!

Pain Stops Instantly!

"Outgro" is a harmless antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, Anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions.

A few drops of "Outgro" in the crevice of the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail, that it can not penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night.—Adv.

"That seems settled then" Harry Underwood said. "Now for a harder question You never can stand the gaff of this job alone, Katrina, yet the chief doesn't want any strangers in on it. How about it? Does your patient have to have strictly professional care every minute, or will it be possible for a couple of huskies" he pointed to himself and Dicky with a grandiloquent gesture, "to pinch hit for you?"

"It will not only be possible but entirely practical," Katherine said. "If, as we are afraid, the case is an extremely short one, I shall be able to do almost everything myself, but if he should linger, or recover, I should have to have regular periods for rest. If you and Dicky could alternate for night duty I could take care of him from daylight till dark."

"Sort of a sixteen-hour shift, with sandwiches and coffee at the wells known allow," Dicky said, grinning at her. "Your spirit is willing, Katrina, or else you're a sort of a doubting Thomasina as to the quality of nursing which Harry and I could provide, but I think you'll find your flesh getting weak and trembly after a few days of that regime. Nay, nay, Little One. Harry and I will alternate for night duty, all right, but it will begin before dark in this daylight-saving regime, and just some time after daylight. And the one who 'alternates' will always be on call during the day in any emergency."

"As I shall be at night," Katherine said promptly. "And you are awfully good to insist upon taking so much of the burden. When I think of some of the hours I put in when I was across—this arrangement is child's play."

"But you're not in the army now," Harry Underwood hummed the paraphrase, and Katherine smiled at him as she rose from her chair.

"I must get back to my patient," she said. "Dr. Gibson assured me that he did not need me for a few minutes, or I would not have dared come over. Good-bye, everybody. Good luck with the play, Madge!"

There was nothing but sincerity in her voice, but I felt suddenly as if the words were a mockery—unintentional—but keen, nevertheless. Everybody else in the household concerned with the great issues of life and death, and I, alone, outside it all, protected from it, was being wished "success with my play!"

Noted Aviatrix Is Speaker at Meeting of University Women

WHEN housekeeping duties palled, Mrs. Blanche Wilcox Noyes took to the air. In an interesting and at times humorous manner, the noted aviatrix from Cleveland addressed the Marion Association of University Women at a dinner meeting last evening at Ranger's Inn. Thirty-four members were seated for dinner.

Mrs. Noyes, one of the two women in the United States who are flying autogyros, and who placed fourth in the 1929 Cleveland Air derby, presented a charming appearance last evening.

Her formal evening gown was of pale blue taffeta and tulle, tucked in puffs to the floor. With this she wore an evening cap of the taffeta and tulle, and a shoulder corsage.

The greater part of her talk dealt with her experience in the 1929 derby in which she flew a 220 horsepower plane for the first time. Mrs. Noyes has been married three years to Dewey Noyes, who is in the United States air service. Shortly after their marriage she became lonesome at home and to be near her husband she had to learn to fly. Mr. Noyes bought her a 90 horsepower machine and she flew for six months before entering the Cleveland air derby.

A plane was ordered for her for the derby, and her first glimpse of the plane was at Wichita, Kas, a week before the derby started.

Mrs Noyes told of the harrowing experiences she encountered in the derby, first of a dead-stick landing she was forced to make at Santa Monica. Solder left in the gas line when the ship was hurriedly assembled, caused the engine to miss, and her friends tried to discourage her in keeping on with the flight.

She admitted that she was "scared to death" all the way across the continent. In speaking of her landing at the San Bernardino airport, she complimented the Marion airport by saying that it looked like a million dollars compared to the San Bernardino airport when she saw it in the 1929 derby.

After flying across a mountain to make better time, landing in Sonora, Mex., in territory in which foreign planes were confiscated and getting away in the nick of time, and of having a fire started in her baggage while flying near Pecos, Tex., she told of the thrill of arriving in Cleveland, in fourth place in the derby.

This year Mrs. Noyes entered the derby but didn't make any record. "I enjoyed more than anything, the friendship I made in this year's derby," she added.

She has had 125 hours in autogyro flying, and in her opinion, the autogyro will never be an accepted mode of transportation.

Miss Lucile Foreman, president of the club, presided last evening and following Mrs. Noyes' talk, announced the club committees for the year. They follow:

Program, Mrs. Kenneth D. Smith, Mrs, Earl T. Smart, Miss Nell Freer, Miss Dorothy Strellitz, Miss Pansy Rauhauser; membership, Miss Ruby Craner, Mrs Merle Hamilton, Mrs. Frank Barnhill; finance, Mrs. E. Paul Bachman, Mrs. Howard Geer, Miss Isabelle Stump; scholarship, Miss Mabel Turney, Miss Isabel Freer, Miss Winona Hughes.

New Elegance at Teatime in Richly Bedecked Coats

By DIANA MERWIN
(Associated Press Fashion Editor)

PARIS.—The dressy coats, hats and shoes which women will wear with their teatime frocks this fall are more elegant than they have been in the last decade.

In keeping with the "grand dame" mode, which smart Parisians have adopted for the cocktail hour, coats are designed of rich fabrics decked in luxurious furs.

Shoes Spike Heeled

Shoes are dainty spike heeled sandals of faille or dull kid in black or a color matching the coat, while chapeaux are of velvet or felt decked with a plume, a wing or sprightly bow falling over the hair.

Black is the favorite teatime coat color, although a new putty beige and deep reds, greens and purples, so dark they are almost black, are offered to color the mode.

Ermine, once reserved for the robes of queens, is one of the smartest furs.

Black broadcloth coats with swirling ermine collars and melon cuffs are the fashionable Parisian's favorite teatime wraps.

Smooth black wools trimmed in white galyak, mink or black broadtail are another variation of the mode.

Velveteen Coats New

Velveteen coats are a new fall offering for the woman who likes to be different. Steel grey velveteens trimmed in black seal and putty-beige velvets decked with silver fox are designed for the picturesque woman.

A black-green velvet wrap collared in glistening coq feathers instead of fur is displayed for the woman of eccentric taste.

Most of the formal daytime coats are designed with a slightly fitted waistline, although many models follow a straight line; collars roll high around the face, while cuffs often extend to the elbow.

The hose worn with teatime outfits are sheer and dark, while gloves of suede of kid match the color of the coat fabric or fur.

Popular for fall and winter is this velvet ensemble, including one of the smallest of the new hats. The coat has a roll collar of sable.

Meeting Honors High Priestesses

PAST worthy high priestess night was observed last night at the meeting of Marion Shrine, No. 15, White Shrine of Jerusalem in the Masonic temple. Honor guests included past worthy high priestess, Mrs. D. W. Brickley, Mrs. Byron Wilson, Mrs. Phillip Ebert, Mrs. John Rush, Mrs Laura Dornbaugh, Mrs. Anna Beaver and Mrs. E. B Lynch and Past Watchmen Theron Conkle, Byron Wilson and Delbert Hunter.

A potluck dinner preceded the meeting the table being decorated with vases and baskets of fall bloom. Special music was furnished by Mrs Delbert Hunter and greetings were extended by worthy high priestess, Mrs. Hattie Guthery and Delbert Hunter, watchman. Three applications were received. Announcement was made of the rally day to be observed at the next meeting Oct. 26 at which time each member will be responsible for the attendance of another member.

LOOK too pure, Venice thought resentfully, that's one trouble. Purity is out of style.

An open, innocent sort of face, a face that spelled no guile, no allure, no mystery. Just a wistful girl, unsure of things and unable to pretend.

It was here that she realized and resented the purity of her look. I should have a lily in my hand and a fillet of pearls in my hair. She smiled wryly at the absurdity of such a picture in a day of Einstein and Eckener and Rudy Vallee. Her sense of humor often came at such moments to pierce her most gloomy speculations. And my neck's too long and thin. She raised her head to exaggerate its slenderness. But I'm too thin all over for that matter. It's lucky I'm not very tall.

She sighed.

But it isn't really my looks. They're average. I'm not flippant enough, not gay enough. And no one's interested these days in the type of girl I really am. At least no one who gads about and enjoys what the papers call society. And mother won't let me out of the social grooves. Oh, God.

She went to throw herself on the chaise lounge again. Bitterness assailed her. Her mind leaped to paint a picture of herself at the Goadbys' party. Trying so hard to be pleasant, watching herself fail flat. The consciousness of her own failure. If only she weren't so sensitive, didn't realize herself what a dud she was. Isn't that what they called those shells that were tossed forth and never exploded? A dud. It exactly described her. No. She had started to pull off a stocking when the door slowly opened.

"Are you wearing your new dress tonight, dear?"

"I'm not going, Mother."

"Of course you're going. What's the matter, Venice? Aren't you well?"

Mrs. Muir stood just inside the doorway, a large aristocratic woman, white haired, beautifully corseted, beautifully groomed. Her face was clear-cut like a cameo, meaningless and charming. It had been so thoroughly schooled in the social graces that one felt its smiles were taken on and off regardless of the emotion behind them. Like something kept in a reticule to be hastily donned or discarded at other people's pleasure. She spoke with a slight trace of Southern softness. She was proud of having been a Lee from Virginia. Family tree was her gauge, money merely the fertilizer that made it flourish. She condescended to be a leader of society in New York, but in spite of the condescension she earnestly longed to have her daughter a younger leader in that glowing, superficial, indifferent sphere.

Venice sat with a sheer stocking in one hand and that look of misery in her eyes which annoyed her mother so frequently.

"No, I feel all right," she said. "But it's the same old thing. Why should I go? I never have a good time."

"It's your own fault. Why shouldn't you have a good time? You're unusual looking, you have pretty clothes and a pretty figure."

"I have no small talk, Mother. I'm not gay and carefree like most of the girls in circulation. I—I—don't know what it is."

I'm like a box, she thought, whose lid invariably sticks at inopportune moments. I never can open it quickly enough to show the entertaining things inside.

"You must cultivate small talk, sincerity."

"It's not natural to me, Mother."

"Then affect it. Come along, Venice. Put on those new brocaded slippers and the yellow dress."

There was a silent battle. Mrs. Muir won.

Venice got reluctantly to her feet. Twenty minutes later she stood before the dressing-table, a slim, supple young figure in long tight-fitting honey-colored satin, jade at her ears and throat. Her russet hair gleamed lustrous as the satin of her frock. The pallor of her face was as startling as the flesh tints of certain old masters. It belonged to an aesthetic age. Venice turned slowly before the mirror.

"My dress should be cut to the waist in back," she said. "Its not being cut quite low enough spoils all the smartness."

"Nonsense, my dear. Do you want to ape the musical comedy stage?"

"Why not? The stage gets its clothes from the best French dressmakers. Most of the girls we know have their necks cut daringly."

"They need sensational touches to commend them. You have your breeding."

Venice reflected that a young man at a dance did not pursue you for your family tree.

"You look lovely, dear," said Mrs Muir. She went and kissed her. She never meant to be unkind. It was all for Venice's good.

Venice, discreetly followed by Nora, climbed forlornly into a taxi. The maid was to be left at the Goadbys' front door.

It was a big stone house in the east Seventies. Lights glowed warmly from behind every shaded window and a line of cars stood along the curb outside. A butler admitted her to a wave of warm, scented air.

Venice climbed the broad stairway to leave her wrap with innumerable others in Lola Goadby's room. Her eye caught with quick pleasure the lovely mass of color tumbled brocade and velvet and fur made on the bed. Ruby and jade and ebony, silver and bronze and gold. She re-powdered her nose, gave herself another penciling of lipstick and then went reluctantly down the stairs. She stood nervously at the foot, staring into the big room where the dancing was in gay and noisy sway.

"Hello Venice."

It was Jerry Ward, one of the young men who had always been courteous in passing.

"Hello," echoed Venice. Here's my chance, she thought. to say something amusing that will make him want to stay. "I—I—"

He was gone.

She took a tentative step nearer the ballroom. Couples footrotted by. One or two waved to her. Color crept into her face at the pained embarrassment of this standing about alone. Suddenly Lola Goadby saw her. With the exception of Nolly Spalding, Lola was Venice's only really intimate friend. She was blonde, snub-nosed, brown-eyed, eager, effervescent. She broke from her partner's dancing and, dragging him by the hand threaded her way to Venice.

"Hello, darling. You're late."

"I know. I almost didn't come."

"Same old reason, I suppose. Well, not at my party, Venice. This is Miss Muir, Mr. Reese." Lola deliberately went away and left them together.

CHAPTER 2
Technique of Popularity

"HOW-DO-YOU-DO," said Venice, holding out a hand. She had a firm, strong clasp like a boy's that was always surprising people. It didn't belong to a slim girl with fragile skin and soft, grave eyes.

He was a handsome youth. Black pomaded hair, sleek as a patent leather skull cap upon his head; laughing brown eyes; weak, pretty mouth.

"Ah," he smiled, shaking her hand and not noticing that surprising grip of hers "you have a lover in the village who dislikes you."

"No, I didn't want to come and my mother made me," why had she said that? It was so flat and unencouraging and dull. "What I've called dependable."

Immediately Venice felt ashamed. She hated people who made excuses for themselves. Especially to strangers. She was always doing it. "I don't know why I said that. I'm not dependable. I'm—I'm—"

"Don't tell me what you are," cried Reese. "Let me find out for myself. Shall we dance?"

Venice slipped out on to the floor with him.

She danced well. He did not apparently want to talk so she happily gave herself up to the rhythm and they glided to and fro, this way and that together. The music stopped. Venice looked anxiously about. Was young Reese going to be stuck with her? This fear made her nervous, tongue-tied.

"Do you like to read?" she finally managed.

They started dancing again. She loved to read. If some one would talk books to her she could be conversational all night.

"Not in the evenings," he said.

Here was her chance for humorous repartee. She couldn't. Nothing amusing would come into her head. Silence.

"You dance well," he murmured.

"Thank you," said Venice.

Again silence. It pressed down on her as heavily as a tangible weight. Around and around. Partnerless men came out from their line and danced with other girls. Venice and young Reese went on and on. She began to dance badly through her misery. She could not concentrate on dancing when she was trying to concentrate on a tactful manner of helping him to be rid of her. I can go to the dressing room, she thought. The dance seemed endless.

"Here you are. "It was Lola interrupting with a new young man. "This is Miss Muir, Mr. Parker. You know Donny Reese, Ted."

Venice went off in the arms of Mr. Parker. He was a fat and perspiring youth who blew in her ear as they danced and pumped her arm up and down like some lever of steady rotation. She could feel her hair at one side getting mussed. It irritated her. But still he was a new partner. Wallflowers cannot be choosers. The saxophone growing positively dissolute in its frenzy, it's laughing at me, went her thoughts. And then she saw an old gentleman who was a friend of her mother. She gave him her brightest smile. Could she have but realized, it was the sort of smile she should have been offering all the younger men. It warmed her face like a lamp suddenly lit from within. The grey eyes unexpectedly lost their limpidity, the mournful little mouth went up at the corners.

"Will you dance with an octogenarian, Venice?"

"No, but I'll dance with you, Mr. Partridge."

Why couldn't she say things like that to her contemporaries? Perhaps they made her shy. Whatever it was, she felt awkward when it came to looking into their eyes or up into their faces as other girls did. It made her self-conscious, strangely ill at ease. She felt they knew her Jack, mentally criticised her. Older men took her for what she was worth.

Mr. Partridge took her to an adjoining room for some punch and they sat in a bay window laughing and chatting. Venice began to have a lovely time. This was no effort. This was simply being herself. Mr. Partridge had read Cakes and Ale and liked it as much as she did. She thought Louis Bromfield's 24 Hours ought to get the Pulitzer prize. He disagreed. They had a spirited and stimulating argument.

Lola wandered up with Jerry Ward and joined them on the broad window seat. The punch helped. It gave her the courage to momentarily rest a careless hand on Jerry's arm the way Lola did and to lean across Mr. Partridge to look him in the eyes without remembering to feel foolish. She managed two funny stories. She forgot to wonder if Jerry was mentally examining her. She was about to have her glass refilled when he asked her to dance.

It was too bad. The warm glory was not firmly enough established within her. It faded quickly and she and Jerry were going around and around indefinitely. She became a nervous automaton again desperately hoping to capture another partner. Her eyes slid analytically about the room examining this girl and that in an effort to discover how they did it. Beatrix Hardwick's head was pressed tight against her partner's shoulder, her eyes closed. No man had ever looked so soulfully contented when dancing with Venice. Doris Norton was laughing up into her young man's face with a merry sort of abandon. Before the laugh had faded on her lips another partner had claimed her. Alice Schuyler was whispering as she danced. Betty Paine was melted into her partner. They appeared as one form swaying slowly, tensely. Some one came to pry them loose. Immediately Betty was fused into another dinner jacket with all the closeness and intimacy of the first. Half around the room and another young man demanded her.

But I couldn't dance like that, thought Venice. I'd die of embarrassment if I tried She suddenly attempted to press herself closer to Jerry and raised her face to his with that secret look of Alice Schuyler's.

To Be Continued.

A Story of Humorous Boyhood Adventure

By JUDD MORTIMER LEWIS

TUESDAY. It was cooler than ever when me and Jubilee woke up this morning, and I let Jubilee down and shut the window so I wouldn't freeze before I got my short britches on. It isn't as cold as it will be, but it is colder than it was in vacation. When I had went down and fed the bare-burner and went out to the barn to milk the dummed brutes and the bunch began to show up Red came and he was good and sore about making an Indien out of his kid brother. He said his mother had to wash him with gasoline and then she had to rub him with goose grease so the gasoline wouldn't burn him, and he said that none of us had better come around his house again for a long time.

I said him we didn't want to. We don't have to go around to his house; we have got lots of places better than that to go to. And when he acted the wind passed a remark I said him about his shirt tail and a lot of shoes. Then I called him if I wouldn't go around where was he looking around and wanted him what was the matter with him, and he said with all of his face that was about all he wouldn't [illegible] and

125 AT DINNER FOR MEMBERS OF BOARDS

Sunday School and Church Bodies of Epworth M. E. Hold Annual Meeting.

The annual dinner meeting of the official and Sunday school boards of Epworth M. E. church, last night in the church dining room, drew an attendance of approximately 125 members.

The tables were centered with vases of fall flowers and baskets of the flowers decorated the room. The Sunday school orchestra furnished music during the dinner hour. The Marion Minister's quartet, composed of Dr. Turley, pastor of Epworth, Rev. C. V. Roop of First United Brethren church, Rev. W. Martell George of Wesley M. E. church and Rev. G. G. Canfield of First Church of the Brethren, sang "Speed Away" and "The Beautiful Land," accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Turley.

J. J. Stafford presided in the program hour, which opened with singing led by Mrs. Earl N. Hale. Following the reading of an article, "This," by Mr. Stafford, J. B. Bain who has been a member of the official board of Epworth for 35 years, gave a short talk on "Responsibilities and Duties of an Official of the Board."

"The Responsibilities and Duties of a Sunday School Teacher" was the subject of a talk by Fred L. Carhart. George W. Bacon, superintendent of the Sunday school, talked on "The Goal of the Sunday School Teacher."

In a talk, "Goal of an Official Board Member," Dr. Turley said that the goal of an official board member should be to make Epworth church a friendly church, a ministering church and a soul-winning church.

Songs led by Mrs. Hale closed the meeting. The program was arranged by Mr. Hale and A. W. Kette. Dinner was served by Circle No. 2 of the aid society.

Last night's meeting was the first of several special meetings this week in preparation for Rally day Sunday. The Ladies' Aid societies will be in charge of the service Wednesday night and on Friday night a pageant, "The Lost Church," will be presented by members of the Senior Epworth League, under the direction of Mrs. R. W. Kauble.

52 MILLION ACRES SWEPT BY FLAMES

Ravages of Forest Fires for Year Shown in Federal Report.

By United Press

WASHINGTON—Forest fires in the United States last year seared 52,000,000 acres—an area greater than that of the states of Ohio and Indiana combined—and caused approximately $85,988,350 damages.

The forest service of the department of agriculture reports, however, that organized protection has proved its effectiveness, for, to every acre of protected land burned there were eight acres of unprotected land. Only one-third of the country's forests are now without some kind of protection.

Total protected land burned during 1930 was 5,809,320 acres as compared with 46,457,140 acres of unprotected land.

Careless smokers caused 17,452 fires, or more than 20 per cent of the blazes.

Damage estimates do not include such inestimable damages as those to wild life, young growth and numerous intangible values. It is estimated that four per cent of the area burned will not restock itself naturally with tree growth.

The 180,000,000 acres of National Forest are protected by the Forest Service and arrangements are being made with states and private owners to cooperate resources for the protection of other private and public lands. Last year [illegible] 2,500,000 acres were added to the area under organized protection.

Tests have shown that airplanes coated with wax travel faster than those treated with the usual finish, the wax reducing the air resistance.

rising person furnishes ties with monkeys of The range from misle fellows to gigantic simians with terrifying features. Near Hollywood an ambitious gentleman is engaged in raising snakes, while another devotes his time to growing giant frogs.

And so it has become a simple matter to film jungle pictures. Studios may acquire lions from a farm nearby. Isolated brush lands in Mexico provide excellent settings for filming the pictures. The sequences are later interwoven with real shots of jungle forests. In this manner the cost of production is kept low.

In the synthetic jungle scenes the procedure is to select a quiet site where a large arena is circled by a high wire fence. Camera pits are dug and ambushed. The animals are then turned loose to fight among themselves while cameras and microphones record the thrilling action.

Has Largest Collection

What is believed to be the largest collection of trained and tamed animals, birds and reptiles in Hollywood is owned by J. H. Kerr who can supply bears, pumas, skunks, coyotes, mountain lions, foxes, wolves, hogs, hawks, owls, eagles, crows, ducks, geese, chickens, parrots, pheasants, peacocks, snakes, turtles, lizards, raccoons and a score of other animals. The collector also owns thirty-five trained dogs and thirty cats.

One menagerie goes in for larger and more ferocious animals such as tigers, lions, leopards and elephants. These beasts are exceedingly difficult to manage and extreme caution must be exercised in working with them. An unguarded moment may cost a trainer his life.

RANKS RUSSIAN TRAINING HIGH

System of Citizen-Making Best, Professor Says; Puts U. S. Third.

By International News Service

CHICAGO—Russia's system of making citizens is the best in the world while the United States ranks third in its efforts to prepare the child for citizenship.

This is the conclusion reached by Charles E. Merriam, professor of political science at the University of Chicago, in his new book, "The Making of Citizens."

Prof. Merriam declares that Italy also has a better system of civic education than the United States, and that France, Germany and Switzerland obtain about the same results as America. Austria-Hungary's civic efficiency is the lowest in the world, mainly because of the conflicting interests of its many races.

He says in difference of business to responsibility for governmental standards and the apathy of labor for political action are blamed for the weaknesses in the American system.

National Drawbacks

Russia is retarded by the shadow of capitalism and the dust of personal liberty resulting from the collectivism movement. England, which has no clearly defined system for making citizens, is threatened by the advancing proletarian movement.

France and Germany are endangered by the rising tide of the proletarian movement and by loyalty to the church while an armed truce between the church and the state hinders Italy in the making of Fascists. Old Austria and Switzerland must fight conflicting interests and races.

Religion is a powerful competitor of the state especially when it coincides with the interests of race, region or economic class. The economic class movement no longer is an obstacle to citizenship, and anarchism is expressed more in poetry than in politics, according to the professor.

Struggles over the position of religion in the organized life of nations and the control of the schools around which furious controversies will rage are predicted in the book. The school, in fact, is heralded as the great civic educator.

Regards Training Inadequate

"The typical child emerges from school inadequately informed regarding other groups in the world," Prof. Merriam stated. "He is brought up as the lone child in the world. The academic secrecy that is thrown around sex relations is rivaled by silence regarding international relations."

Thus, when the child grows up, he is initiated into suffrage in a barbershop or a basement of some dingy building which is a poor method of making citizens, according to Merriam.

Downfall of the dictatorial system in Italy and Russia is predicted with the reestablishment of the party system. In spite of her theoretical internationalism, Russia's nationalism is stronger now than it ever was, says the author.

BROTHERHOOD HEARS WEBBER

Director of Adult Work in U. B. Church Gives Address Here.

Martin I Webber international director of Adult Work for the United Brethren church was the guest speaker at a meeting last night of the Brotherhood at the First United Brethren church Webber chose as his topic Men and the Church"

Webber who is making a speaking tour in the district speaks tonight at Galion Wednesday at Bucyrus Thursday at North Robinson and Friday at Shelby

His talk in part follows There is today a growing interest in the men's part of the church program Brotherhoods and church clubs for men are being organized in many communities

A few of the larger denominations in America are spending as much as $50 000 annually to promote men's activities in the church

Although the United Brethren church does not have a large budget for its men's work the men of the church are responding in a most loyal way and are doing service which is indispensable to the life of the church.

"The men's program of the United Brethren church has seven great objectives

The foremost of these is that of winning fellow men to Christ No privilege is so great and no task so important as sharing Christ with our fellows

Church attendance is another important objective When the adults properly solve their own problem of church attendance there will be no need to worry about the church attendance of youth

"Other objectives for men's work are world missions social life citizenship church finances and boys work

"The Brotherhood should select 100 or more boys in this community and determine to give them the guidance and help that will make it possible for them to rise to places of prominence and useful ness"

The stage from which the talks were given was a bower of baskets of bright fall flowers. Mrs. Harry Williams opened the informal program with two piano numbers, followed by three numbers sung by Mrs. Bland Creasap, with Miss Grace Kline at the piano. Mrs. F. A. Boyer played the accompaniment for the community songs sung.

The new Parent-Teachers' association voted to organize a Mother Singing group, following a talk by Mrs. G. E. Turley. Mrs. Russell Snare was elected delegate to the state convention in Dayton, opening Wednesday.

George A. Bowman, superintendent of schools, was among the guests. Refreshments were served at tables decorated in keeping with the Hallowe'en season.

Church Bells Annoy Man on Roaring Motorcycle

With a noise that resembled the Allied armies laying down a barrage, a motorcyclist equipped with goggles and everything, roared up to police headquarters Saturday night with a demand that some action be taken about the noise being made by church bells on Sunday morning.

The early bell, he said, did not disturb him so much, but the second bell rang entirely too long and interferred with his sleep.

That anyone who rode a motorcycle should complain about the noise made by church bells was almost too much for Sergeant L. E. Reardon, who could only "feebly" wave the man to Captain Ira Shrock, who disposed of the case.

13-Year-Old Boy Student at University.

By The Associated Press
CHICAGO, Oct. 13—Predictions are being made at the University of Chicago that if any student wins a bachelor degree in about two years instead of the customary four, his name is likely to be Dugald Stewart Dougall, 15-year-old Indianapolis boy.

Young Dugall had the best scholastic record of any freshman this year, an "A, plus" average. His accomplishments of the past include:

Reading at 3.
Writing at 4.
Working algebra problems at five and a half.

Under a new system, inaugurated at the university this year, it is possible for students to finish in less than four years.

Prosecution Airs Private Life of Gang Leader in Fraud Trial.

CHICAGO, Oct. 13—The private life of Al Capone, an authentic account that makes up in documentary proof what it lacks in romanticism, is being written into court records by an energetic corps of prosecutors.

It shows him as a humble bar-keeper in a Coney Island saloon, as a $75 a week employe of the old Chicago gang boss, Johnny Torrio, and finally as the affluent hoodlum leader.

The authors took more than two years to gather data for this story and they hope to write a new chapter themselves, a chapter in which the sear-faced gang lord will find himself behind federal prison bars for evading income taxes.

From his $12 silk underwear to his diamond studded Christmas gifts, the jury, and the records, get it all. One of the Christmas gifts, a $275 diamond belt buckle, has been introduced as evidence and duly examined by the 12 farmers and tradesmen who must decide Capone's case. A witness said Capone bought 30 just like it for Christmas in 1926.

The Capone wardrobe, according to the salespersons who served him, includes $150 overcoats, $135 suits, $4.95 necktie, $2.75 handkerchief, $27.50 shirts (plus $1 each for monograms), $2 collars. He buys, they said, $250 worth of ties and handkerchiefs at a time, $300 worth of shirts, $90 worth of silk underwear. One store sold him $3,715 worth of suits and overcoats in two years.

Custom-made automobiles have cost him from $5,500 to $12,500 witnesses said. Thousands of dollars went for Chinese rugs, glassware and knick-knacks.

BUCYRUS — Application for a marriage license was made today by Maurice Sipes of Galion and Bonita Price of Crestline.

Ask Your Druggist What to Do for Varicose Veins

Heppner & Cooper will tell you: "Rub the surface gently towards the body with Moone's Emerald Oil. Makes your leg feel better even while you're doing it, and in minor cases often brings surprising relief.

"Then bind your leg with a bandage three inches wide, and long enough to give the necessary support. Start winding the bandage from the ankle upwards—that's the way the blood flows in the veins.

"Any veins broken? Any ulcers? Emerald Oil will heal them right up. Make your leg as good as new. It doesn't stain, so you needn't be afraid of getting it on your clothes.

"If Moone's Emerald Oil doesn't help you more than anything else you've ever tried, just bring it back and I'll gladly return your money." —Adv.

To Complete Scrapping of Electric Line by Spring

CLEVELAND, Oct. 13—All that remains of the Cleveland Southwestern railway, including the steel rails, the trolley and abandoned freight and passenger cars, will be scrapped and stored in the Elyria shops of the company by early spring of next year.

By that time, C. J. Mayers, receivers for the defunct railway, told International News Service, the work of tearing out the tracks of the abandoned line will be completed and the physical property will be piled up in the Elyria yards of the company to await final court order regarding its disposition.

Tracks on the road's southern division which ran from Cleveland to Bucyrus will be completely torn out by the end of January, Mayers estimated today. The road gang at work on this division at the present time probably will reach Galion Thursday or Friday of this week.

The removal work will continue through all of the winter season, Mayers said, unless the weather forces a halt. In making this announcement, the receiver also revealed his plans for completing the work of removing the tracks and outlined a potential schedule of the progress of the work by cities.

Mayers has court permission to remove the tracks and overhead equipment as far as Mansfield. Tracks will be removed as far as Crestline through Galion and from Mansfield to Crestline, the removed equipment being shipped to Elyria from Crestline by steam train. This will eliminate the necessity of hauling the company's tracks through the city of Mansfield, the receiver explained.

Additional court orders granting permission for the work of tearing up the tracks will be obtained as the removal of the tracks progresses, Mayers said. Agreements have been reached with every local municipal government and the court has signified its intention to grant the additional orders without formal hearings upon Mayers' application.

BOMBS USED IN THEATER STRIFE

Terrorism Attacks Carried into Heart of Chicago Loop District.

By The Associated Press
CHICAGO, Oct. 13—Theater bombers have carried their terrorism into the heart of Chicago's loop.

A black powder bomb, believed by police to have been tossed from an adjoining, taller building, exploded a fraction of a second before it fell on the roof of the Monroe theater late yesterday.

The rush crowd in the loop, startled by the noise, scurried to cover. Several hundred patrons inside the theater were uninjured because the force of the explosion was spent upward, it shattered nearby windows.

It was the second theater bombing in two days, and the twelfth since the Allied Independent Theater Owners association broke with the Chicago Moving Picture Operators' union over the latter's demands that each theater must hire two operators per shift. The owners contend that one operator is sufficient, and imported operators from eastern cities to man the booths. Four attempts to settle their difficulties have been futile.

HOLD LOVE FEAST AT REVIVAL HERE

First Pilgrim Holiness church had a love feast last night with breaking of bread according to the old Wesleyan custom, at the revival services. This week's services are the second in the revival which Rev. F. W. Cox, pastor, is conducting.

Fifteen school children sang, "If We Keep on Believing We Shall Outshine the Sun," after which Rev. Mr. Cox gave a brief message on "Repentance."

He said in part: "Repentance is a thorough change of mind. It is more than a reformation, or just feeling sorry, or merely regretting the wrong done. A man may be sorry and yet go and do the same thing over again, but Bible repentance puts an end to actual sin and leads a man to salvation."

The services are held each night except Saturday, at 7:30.

Ashland-Bucyrus Meet Friday in Major N. C. O. Fray

WHIPPETS TO CLASH WITH GALION ELEVEN IN SATURDAY BATTLE

Harding Takes on Outsider at Findlay; Mansfield Has Open Date.

Before the current week has passed into history followers of N. C. O football will have some idea of how the league entries compare this year. Four of the six teams played in league contests last Saturday and the other two will get their first taste of league competition this week. Ashland and Bucyrus will play on Friday afternoon at Bucyrus and Galion will travel to Shelby to help the Whippets inaugurate the league season in the border town. Mansfield will enjoy an open date after whipping Galion 27-0 in the opener last Saturday and Harding will go to Findlay for a non league engagement.

League interest this week will center almost exclusively in the Bucyrus battle with Ashland Friday. Galion is almost a certainty to defeat Shelby Saturday, although the loss by injury of Grubaugh and Goldsmith, backs, will hurt the attack of the Orangemen.

The outcome of the Bucyrus-Ashland battle is difficult to predict. On paper they appear fairly evenly matched. Ashland walloped Harding 26-6 last Saturday and did not have to extend themselves much in doing it. Bucyrus did not play last week, but has shown considerable power in earlier non-league frays.

The Ashland-Bucyrus battle should provide an interesting duel between Nick Dolby of Ashland and Gene Talbott of Bucyrus. Both quarterbacks, these boys are the principal threats of their teams and both are plenty tough to stop. Remove these two from the line-ups and it would probably be just another football game. With these two in, anything may happen. Either can pass, punt and run with more than usual skill. And both will have a lot of help from their team mates in doing any of the three. It looks like a tough game.

Harding is not the only school in the N. C. O league singing the blues this week because of injuries to first string players in games of last Saturday. If Galion ever had any hopes of ousting Mansfield from championship perch which the Tygers have held for two straight years, these same hopes were rudely and effectively blasted by the injuring of Charles Grubaugh and Delmore Goldsmith in the battle with the Tygers last week.

Mansfield not only squelched the Orangemen with a 27-0 pasting but seriously injured both of the above named backfield stars. Goldsmith suffered a compound fracture of the left shoulder and Grubaugh had two ribs broken. The latter may play some more this year but his value to the team has been lessened considerably. Goldsmith is lost for the remainder of the year. It's kinda tough.

Rah for Sing Sing!

According to a dispatch from the Associated Press, Sing Sing penitentiary in New York is to promote football teams among the various prison sections. The "student body" is reported buzzing with comment while respective candidates for section teams limber up in their private "rooms." There will be no eligibility rules as regards years of "attendance" and every one of the 2,300 "scholars" may play, whether he is a "freshman" or "postgraduate."

No cheer has as yet been composed but reports have it that one death house inmate suggested as a slogan, "I could die for dear old Sing Sing."

GRIFFITH RULES ON POST-SEASON GAMES

All Big Ten Charity Affairs Must Be Strictly Conference Battles.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Oct. 13—Any post-season charity football games played by Western conference teams this season will be strictly conference games.

Following a flood of suggestions and requests for charity games with non-conference teams, Major John L. Griffith, Big Ten commissioner of athletics, today explained the league's stand as outlined by the faculty committee on athletics.

Major Griffith said the conference had decided to suspend its rule limiting teams to eight games each season, to make possible charity contests between big teams on November 28. When this was announced last week, many requests were sent to his office asking that the season be extended as much as four weeks to play games with non-conference teams in all sections of the country.

The committee, he said, agreed only to extend the length of the season one week, and specifically limited the post season games to such Big Ten teams as are available at that time.

It has been indicated that should two teams go through the season undefeated, they would be matched for a title game on November 28, and that other games might be arranged between teams of the same comparative strength.

DAYTON U. GRIDDER TOPS OHIO SCORERS

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 13—By scoring five touchdowns in the first three games of the season, Schnur, University of Dayton halfback jumped to the top of the scoring column among Ohio college and university gridiron players.

Tied for second place comes two Xavier stars, Pennington and Beckwith, each have scored three touchdowns, and kicked three points after goal for a total of 21. Cullotta of John Carroll and Nelson of Wooster, come next with 19 each, gained by a trio of touchdowns and one point afterward.

During the first three weeks of the season a total of 148 touchdowns were scored by Buckeye teams with only 73 points afterward being registered. Only two field goals have been made, Kliemo of Capital and Corry of Miami, marking up such points.

Winning Teams Here Will Get Flags Thursday

The Marion recreation baseball season was unofficially completed several weeks ago when the First Presbyterian Sunday school team defeated St. Mary's church team to win the city championship. The season will be officially closed Thursday, Oct. 15, when the annual banquet sponsored by the city softball commission is held. The banquet will be held this year in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. It will be served by the First Reformed church Ladies' Aid society. Approximately 75 persons are expected to attend the affair, commission Secretary Elmer Shaw announced today. The banquet will start at 6 p. m.

W. N. Harder, local attorney and softball enthusiast is expected to act as toastmaster of the occasion, although his selection has not been officially announced.

The pennant winning teams of the four city leagues, St. Mary's of the No. 1 Sunday school, First Presbyterians of No. 2 circuit, C. D. & M. of the Industrial loop and Kappas of the Commercial league will be guests of the commission at the banquet. Approximately 20 umpires will also be guests of the commission.

Any one interested in recreation baseball is invited to attend the banquet. The cost to those other than the above guests of the commission will be 75 cents a plate. Reservations should be made to Elmer Shaw at the Y. M. C. A. not later than Wednesday.

The four league winning teams will be given pennants by the commission at the banquet. The members of the city championship team, First Presbyterians, will also be given individual medals.

SAILOR POUNDS OUT WIN OVER CARNERA

Sharkey Hammers Vast Venetian Mercilessly To Take Easy Decision.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Oct. 13—The bigger they come the better Jack Sharkey likes it and Primo Carnera, for one, won't venture to deny it.

In the same ring at Ebbets field where he found 170-pound Mickey Walker too tough a foe to take a few weeks ago, Sharkey blasted his way to a decisive victory on points over the 260-pound Carnera last night and bounced himself right back to the forefront of challengers for Max Schmeling's heavyweight crown.

Sharkey worked methodically on the big Venetian and relentlessly cut him down to size. Before the Boston sailor's hand was raised in token of victory after 15 rounds of spectacular milling, Sharkey had floored Carnera for one nine count, closed one of the Italian's eyes and had given him so savage a beating that Primo was on the verge of a knockout on a half dozen occasions.

YALE INVADES WEST SATURDAY FOR GAME WITH STAGG ELEVEN

Chicago Maroons Drill on New Offensive for Intersectional Battle.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Oct. 13—Captain Albie Booth and his men of Yale will be the first team to have a look at Amos Alonzo Stagg's latest contribution to football when they meet in Stagg field next Saturday.

Stagg has been thinking up things to make football more difficult for opponents for nearly 40 years and he is hopeful that his new offense will give the Maroons a victory over his own alma mater's eleven. Chicago's success has not been much since 1924. This season, however, the talent shapes up noticeably better and the old man has been able to develop a team capable of holding Michigan's powerful squad to a 13 to 7 victory.

Has New System

Stagg's new system involves a line shift and employs the "flanker" formation which worked well two years ago, especially on forward passes. He did not use it last week because of ineligibility of two backs, but is now training several substitutes.

Michigan's work against the Maroons was so unsatisfactory last week that Coach Harry Kipke ordered a long offensive scrimmage yesterday. He also moved Bill Hewitt, a regular end, to Captain Roy Hudson's fullback position and sent Ted Petoskey, a sophomore, to Hewitt's end, and indicated the Wolverines would line up that way against Ohio State Saturday.

At Ohio, Coach Sam Willaman showed his men motion pictures of their defeat at Vanderbilt last week. The movies revealed that the Buckeye blocking in the first two periods was to great assistance to Vanderbilt, and a session on fundamentals followed.

Purdue Loses Risk

Purdue may have to do without halfback Ed Risk against Wisconsin Saturday, due to an abscess. The line is Coach Noble Kizer's other big problem and yesterday's drill was devoted to forwards. Although tied by Alabama Poly Saturday, Wisconsin's squad is actually confident of downing Purdue.

Joe Zeller, veteran guard, and a pair of sophomore backs, Sabik and Sawicki, rejoined the Indiana squad and probably will be ready to start against Iowa this week. Things were not so good at Iowa yesterday, the squad having returned from its disastrous invasion of Texas A. & M., underweight and weary from sweltering Texas weather.

Northeastern and Notre Dame did not work yesterday. The Wildcats attended the funeral of Trainer King Brady, leaving drills for the California (Southern branch) to open today. The Irish were given a rest and also were to begin preparation for Drake today. Illinois yesterday started polishing its offensive for the Michigan battle a week from Saturday.

OHIO WORKS HARD

Williamson Drills Buckeyes for Annual Michigan Fray.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 13—Blocking, tackling, drill on new plays and brushing up on its forward pass defense are on the program for Ohio State gridders this week as coach Sam Willaman prepares his charges for the first Western conference game with Michigan at Ann Arbor, Saturday.

Believing that last week's 26 to 21 defeat at the hands of Vanderbilt may prove beneficial to his team, Willaman plans to work the squad at top speed all week. Possibilities that Ted Rosequist, Cleveland tackle, and Marshall Oliphant, Cleveland Heights, quarterback, would round into shape for Saturday's game bolstered Ohio's hopes. Both were on the injured list last week.

Bill Bell of Akron, another tackle, will be available this week and possibly George Manduia of Cleveland, fullback, which will enable Ohio to place a stronger team on the field at Ann Arbor than it did last week.

PLAN FORMATION OF VOLLEYBALL LEAGUE

Rudolph Invites Sunday Schools To Enter Y Loop for Winter.

Plans are under way for the formation here of a Sunday school volleyball league to compete during the fall and winter season on the Y. M. C. A. court, P. O. Rudolph, physical director of the Y, has issued invitations to the Sunday schools of the city to enter a team in the proposed league. As yet no entries are reported filed but it is expected that several will be within a few days.

Practically the same attendance rules that govern Sunday school basketball will be used in volleyball. Contestors of a particular church will have to attend Sunday school of that church at least twice monthly and must be a member of that Sunday school. A player cannot change teams during the season. Competitors who are members of the Y will not be charged for playing but non-Y members will pay a fee of $1.50 for the entire season. Each team will consist of six players.

Sunday schools wishing to enter a team in the league are urged to get their entries into Rudolph's hands as soon as possible.

My WINNING PLAY

Since Clark Shaughnessy has taken charge of the football destinies of Loyola of the South, the New Orleans team has become nationally famous. In this, the third of a twice-weekly football series written by outstanding coaches themselves, Shaughnessy explains a tricky "touchdown" pass used when the going gets rough.

* * *

BY CLARK SHAUGHNESSY
(Head Football Coach, Loyola of the South)

By The Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS, La.—Loyola of the South beat its two most formidable foes of 1930—Iowa State and Detroit university—with a forward pass play that is as effective as it is spectacular.

The play is one that the Wolves of Loyola have used to exceedingly good advantage many times during the past four seasons. Yet it caught both Iowa State and Detroit flat-footed on successive Saturdays.

Last November, Iowa State's backs, Tegland and Trauger and Impson ploughed a steady path through the Wolves to gain a 7-0 lead.

Loyola was considerably outweighed and the Wolves were making little headway with their fast running attack.

Fooled Iowa State

Suddenly in midfield, Joe Tetlow started on a wide left end run. He had gone about ten yards toward the left side when he stopped dead, wheeled, and shot a 25-yard pass to Mickey Moore, Loyola's quarterback, on right sideline.

Tetlow's run, exactly similar to several previous attempts to circle that end, had drawn the Iowa State secondary with him. Moore was left with a wide open scamper to the goal for a touchdown that so bewildered Iowa State that they never fully recovered and were beaten 14-7.

Against Detroit, a stronger team, the same play brought Loyola victory, although this time the actors were Sam Zelden, as the passer, and Clarence Smith, the receiver of a 35 yard heave.

Here follows one way the play is worked:

With the line and backfield unbalanced to the right, the ball is snapped to a back who necessarily is free and a good passer, directly behind center.

Starts to Play

The back starts to the right as though on an orthodox end run several of which had been tried previously. One back charges straight through the line, with his hands in the air and calling loudly for a pass.

As the ball is snapped, the offensive left end starts to count slowly to three, his delay throwing the defensive right halfback off guard, who runs over to cover the back shouting for a pass.

The back with the ball runs close to five yards to the right, and then fades back to heave a pass. He is covered by one back, while the fourth member of the backfield dashes through the line toward the right to decoy the defensive left halfback out of position.

The offensive right end, who has been playing about 10 yards out, dashes down the field, pulling the safety man over to cover.

Heaves Long Pass

After fading to the rear, the back with the ball heaves a long pass to the offensive left end who is progressing down the field unnoticed after his three-count delay.

The real secret of the play's success is this delay which causes the defensive backs to take their attention from the ultimate receiver.

However, if the defense does cover this man the play has an excellent chance of success as an end run, or a pass can be made to any of the other eligible receivers who might be open.

REED PLEASES FANS IN MAT EXHIBITION ON SHOVEL PROGRAM

Oregon Welterweight Flashes Speed To Down Toledoan in 40 Minutes.

BY EARL R. McELROY

They're going to have a mighty hard time talking young Ross Reed out of the welterweight wrestling championship if his performance before Marion fans last night in the Steam Shovel gym can be taken as a fair sample of his work.

The little welterweight from Reedsport, Ore., displayed the style that made him three times National A. A. U. champion and once the Olympic champion of the world when he defeated Jack Domar of Toledo in 40 minutes.

Featuring last night's wrestling presentation, the bout was considered by fans the outstanding mat performance ever turned out here and made some of the heavyweight matches look like a slow motion picture of a snail's jaunt along a river path. There was lots of action with both men going in and out of plenty of holds.

Reed took the first fall in 19 minutes when he forced Domar's shoulders to the mat with a headlock. The Toledoan took the second with a top scissors and body press in 11 minutes. Reed finished up the bout 10 minutes later with a body press.

The usual "Cyclone Clyde" Robinson performance was turned in during the semi-final match. At that the "Cyclone" was forced to go three falls before he could defeat Usual Hott, billed as the Ohio farmer boy who turned out to be just that. Robinson took the first fall in 19 minutes with a slam and Hott came back to pin Robinson with a keylock in five minutes. He had another keylock on Robinson and seemed to be on the road to victory but Clyde kicked him in the jaw, ending the match in three minutes.

Jerry Miller showed considerable promise when he won the preliminary match over Dutch Frazier. Both boys are from Marion. Frazier was pinned in seven minutes despite the fact he outweighed his man 10 to 15 pounds.

INDIANS PLAN FEW CHANGES FOR 1932

CLEVELAND, Oct. 13—The 1932 Cleveland Indians will be practically the same club that finished fourth in the American league this season, according to Manager Billy Evans.

"The Indians finished in the first division this year," Evans pointed out. "We have a good club and with experience will be much stronger next year."

Evans said that with the exception of a few "tryouts" up from the minor leagues, the Indians probably will not purchase any new players for the 1932 campaign. He denied rumors the Indians were negotiating with the Athletics for Babe Walberg.

SOTHORON TO HURL IN MAJOR LEAGUE

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 13—One of three major league clubs will get the services of Allan Sothoron, former major league pitcher and for the last three seasons manager of the Louisville Colonels, it was revealed here today.

"I am not at liberty to tell the nature of the offers of the clubs making them," he said in announcing his decision to accept one of the offers instead of returning to pilot the Colonels.

Sothoron built the Louisville ball club into a pennant winner in 1930. This year the Colonels got off to a flying start before stumping badly and ending in seventh place.

Compromise Expected In Railroad Rate Increase

Commerce Commission Likely To Reject Full 15 Per Cent Boost and Propose Alternate Plan To Restore Normal Profits to Carriers

By United Press

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13—A compromise decision affording some measure of relief for the railroads was predicted today as the interstate commerce commission prepared its report on the carriers' petition for a 15 per cent freight rate increase.

Rejection of the full extent of the railroads' plan was regarded as certain. Railroad men themselves do not expect it to be granted entirely. But they hope—and developments have indicated they have some ground for optimism—that the commission will counter with suggestions of its own for bringing earnings back to a higher level.

The commission's decision, which is expected to be ready soon, is the focal point about which revolves a number of efforts to restore railroad credit and strengthen rail securities. If the decision is adverse to the carriers, financial leaders fear a liquidation which will drive the securities to disastrous lows. On the other hand they believe a decision which would keep the railroads could be added to constructive efforts already under way to form a real drive toward better times.

Announcement Soon

An announcement from President Hoover regarding these constructive measures may be made within a few days. Secretary of Treasury Mellon and other administration leaders are working on them. Mr. Hoover himself is close to the situation.

At the conference of President Hoover, Mellon and a group of bankers here last week a proposal to set up a corporation similar to the war finance corporation, with money available for loans on railroad securities, received much support. An alternative measure that is being considered is a means of extending federal reserve discounting railroad bonds.

Meanwhile, Comptroller of the Currency Pole is canvassing the states with the suggestion that legal requirements be lightened so that banks can continue to hold railroad bonds even if the carriers dip below the legal percentage of return on their fixed charges. If a railroad security goes off the legal list, it takes at least five years to get back.

May Regulate Buses

It is felt that the railroads, if strengthened in the present emergency, would be able to build up their own efficiency to cope with the modern methods of competition which have taken away so much of their earnings.

There has been much agitation for the regulation of competing buses. More of this will be heard when congress meets in December. Rail executives are studying the problems and already new devices, such as store-door deliveries to get back some of the business lost to trucks, are making their appearance.

In presenting final arguments, railroad counsel told the interstate commerce commission that if the 15 per cent increase were rejected, the railroads and the investing public would look to the commission for leadership in rehabilitation of this basic industry. Something of the sort probably will develop in the commission's report.

The commission has taken every precaution to guard its decision. Even the approximate date when its announcement may be expected is not known.

COMMUNITY FUND QUOTA DECREASED

Akron Decides It Can Manage on $10,000 Less.

By The Associated Press

AKRON, O., Oct. 13—This industrial center is planning to meet all its relief requirements for the unemployed through the winter with less funds than were raised a year ago.

Trustees of the Better Akron Federation set the annual community fund goal in the neighborhood of $640,000 late yesterday—approximately $10,000 less than was raised a year ago.

Cooperation is the answer, E. J. Larrick, executive secretary of the association, said. The smaller fund will meet the situation on the same basis as last winter, Larrick said.

"Because of the cooperation of the city welfare department, city council and the relief agencies combined with the help given by industrial plants in staggering work.

Jewel Agent Robbed.

By The Associated Press

CINCINNATI, O., Oct. 13—Jewelry valued at $5,000 were taken by a robber who held up Victor H. Hagen, diamond broker, in his office here yesterday. Hagen was bound and gagged by the robber.

GALION, Oct. 13—The body of Mrs. O. M. Bennett who died suddenly Sunday at her home in Findlay, will be brought to this city on Wednesday morning. The body will be taken to the Volk funeral home, from where services will be held Wednesday afternoon with burial in Fairview cemetery.

SEES CANCELLATION

The announcement in London by Sir Norman Angell (above) well known English economist, that he believes all war debts will be cancelled, has attracted international attention. Sir Norman stated he doubts that payments on the debts, suspended by the Hoover moratorium last June, will ever be resumed.

CALEDONIA CHURCH GROUP ENTERTAINED

King's Daughters Circle Holds Meeting. Masquerade.

CALEDONIA, Oct. 13 — Miss Ledusky Garber and Mrs. William Free were guests when Mrs. Lowell Doyle and Mrs. H. E. Williams entertained the members of the Lend a Hand circle of King's Daughters at their meeting, and a masquerade party last night at the home of Mrs. Doyle. Thirty-five responded to roll call.

Mrs. Forest Hipsher conducted devotionals and had charge of the business session. It was announced that fifty boxes of Christmas cards had been received. The donation of fruit and vegetables to be sent to Maple Crest home is to be left at the home of Mrs. H. D. Timson or Mrs. N. D. Hill Oct. 20. Each member is to give one can of fruit and vegetables.

Election of officers resulted in Miss Wanda Geddis' election as leader; Mrs. Curtis Irey, vice leader; Mrs. Kenneth Sickel, secretary; Mrs. H. E. Williams, financial secretary and Mrs. H. D. Timson, treasurer. It was voted to suspend the meetings during July and August each year. It was decided to invite Mrs. Walter Dorsey of Marion, to install the officers at the next meeting, which will be held at the home of Mrs. Lucile Moreland, Harding highway W., and is to be a birthday party with a potluck supper. During the social hour Mrs. Kenneth Sickel won the guessing box prize, Mrs. William Free was awarded the prize for the most comic costume and Mrs. Chester Pommert received the prize for the best dressed.

For the pleasure of Mrs. T. K. Leonard of Los Angeles, Calif., Miss Evelyn Pittman entertained a few friends Friday night. Two tables were arranged for bridge. Miss Betty Crawford was awarded the prize for high score and Miss Wanda Geddis was consoled. Mrs. Leonard received the guest prize. Aside from the honor guest other guests were Miss Naomi Pittman of Sandusky, Miss Iva Gist and Miss Betty Crawford of Marion, Mrs. Raymond Ward, Miss Wanda Geddis, Miss Hope Underwood, Miss Betty Wood, Mrs. William Wood and Mrs. T. J. Pittman.

The regular monthly meeting of the In His Name class of the Church of Christ Sunday school was held in the church basement Friday night. It was decided to have a chicken supper Oct. 30 instead of a Hallowe'en social as was decided at the September meeting. The class will meet with Rev. and Mrs. M. L. Buckley of 452 Bellefontaine avenue, Marion, Nov. 6.

Pillsbury's Best Flour

Has Again Been Selected by Edna M. Ferguson, Home Economics Expert, For Use in the Marion Star Cooking School.

The Supreme Achievement of

Balanced Flour

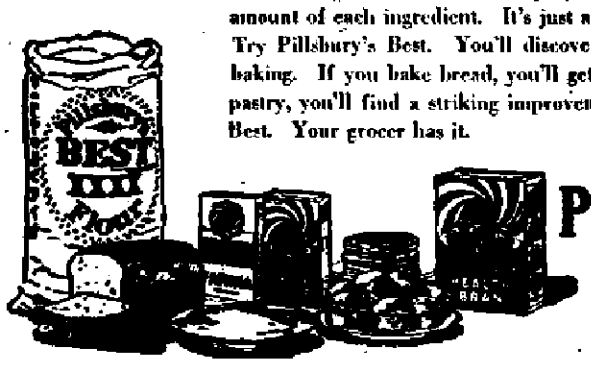
is borne out in all phases of the housewife's every day baking.

"Balance" the most important thing about your recipe—the most important thing about your Flour.

The Pillsbury "balancing" process mixes as many as sixteen different type of the finest wheats. The result is a flour which contains just the right amounts of protein, mineral, moisture, etc.—a flour perfectly "balanced" for all kinds of baking.

Every day more women discover that Pillsbury's Best has some quality not found in other flour. They don't know what it is, but they know it's there. Because everything they bake—bread, biscuits or pastry—turns out better. Because everything has a delicate, unmistakably richer flavor.

You know your recipes must be properly balanced—that you must use just the right amount of each ingredient. It's just as important to use a perfectly "balanced" flour. Try Pillsbury's Best. You'll discover how good baking can become really perfect baking. If you bake bread, you'll get better bread. When you bake biscuits or pastry, you'll find a striking improvement—ask for the "balanced" flour—Pillsbury's Best. Your grocer has it.



Pillsbury's Best Flour

"Balanced" for Perfect Baking

Pillsbury's Best is different. It is scientifically "balanced" for successful baking. "Balanced" according to a wheat combination used only by Pillsbury. There is no other flour just like it. Pillsbury's Best is made from no single variety of wheat—for no single type of wheat contains just the right amount of protein, mineral, etc., to work perfectly for all baking. Pillsbury's Best is made from a special blend of different types of finest wheat. Each of these different wheats has some quality necessary to the perfectly "balanced" flour.

SHARE PRICES DRIFT LOWER

Buying Enthusiasm Weakens; Political Developments Have Sobering Influence.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Oct. 13—Share prices drifted quietly lower today, as last week's buying enthusiasm appeared to have subsided somewhat over the holiday week-end.

Developments in political affairs in England and Germany, and last week's premature expectations of a week-end announcement of the interstate commerce commission's decision on the petition for a 15 per cent increase in freight rates, left Wall street somewhat sobered. Nevertheless, the progress made in setting up the billion dollar credit corporation was still distinctly a stabilization influence.

Rails were the heaviest group in shares, declines of 2 to 5 points appearing in New York Central, New Haven, Baltimore & Ohio, Santa Fe and Union Pacific, losses of 2 to more than 3 points appeared in such issues as American Telephone, General Electric, U. S. Steel, American Can, Consolidated Gas, Eastman, Woolworth, Corn Products, Borden, American Tobacco B, Allied Chemical, Dupont, and Westinghouse. Losses of a point or more appeared throughout the list. Stock was not offered in large volume, however, and sales were largely regarded as profit-taking on last week's sweeping advance.

The firmer money market which has followed last week's increase in the New York rediscount rate was reflected in a sag in the high grade, low yield bonds which normally responded to changes in trends in the money market. Call loans renewed at 2 per cent for the first time since April, after rising from 1½ per cent to 2 during Friday's session. Bankers acceptance rates were again advanced.

CITY SCHOOL BOARD PURCHASES CHAIRS

New Equipment To Be Used at Vernon Heights Building.

The purchase of 150 folding portable chairs for the Vernon Heights building was the only matter of business acted on by the city school board last night. The chairs were purchased from the Clarin Manufacturing Co. of Chicago for 82.47½ cents each, delivered at the building.

The chamber of commerce taxation committee, headed by A. J. Berry, chairman, did not appear before the board to study the budget of the schools for 1932, as planned. Mr. Berry this morning stated that the committee felt the study of a budget should come up at a separate meeting when there was no other business to be handled, and indicated that the committee probably will meet the board informally within the next few days.

Police Hold Man.

Roy Haines, alias Roy Wilson, 44, is being held at police headquarters on an investigation charge. He was arrested at a West side drug store last night when he is alleged to have created a disturbance. Several hypodermic needles were found in his possession when arrested, police say.

Today in Marion Markets

Groceries, Produce, Meat, Grain, Livestock

Local markets are heavily loaded this week with homegrown cauliflower which is selling from 15 to 25 cents a head, dealers report. The price depends on the size of the head. The quality is said to be good with a fair demand. Colder weather is bringing in more cauliflower as opportunities for bleaching it become more in evidence. The supply is good with the price advancing to 15 cents a pound.

According to signs and superstitions, this is "the" week for kraut cabbage. This is shown to be accented by many people by the heavy demand for this article now. The price remains at 90 cents for 100 pounds with a very heavy demand reported.

With the season practically over, cantaloupes are still being offered on some markets. They are selling at 10 to 15 cents each. The quality is reported good, with a limited supply.

Homegrown green onions are coming on the market in larger quantities now, dealers report, with the price at three bunches for 10 cents. The supply is short, however, as the regular season is over, they say.

Butter and egg prices, which have been steadily advancing during the last two or three weeks, continue the gradual increase, according to handlers. The price is now about 29 cents a pound for butter and from 20 to 22 cents a dozen for eggs. The price has been advancing a cent or two every two or three days, dealers report.

RURAL PROPERTY VALUES COMPLETE

Revaluation Figures for Some Sections of County Ready.

With the reappraisement of all buildings and lands in Marion county rapidly nearing completion, County Auditor Earl E Thomas today announced that owners of Marion county property outside the city limits can now learn the reappraised value of their property by visiting the auditor's office

The reappraisement of all property outside the city limits, with the exception of factories and utility properties in the villages and rural school districts, is completed, but the new valuations will not be totalled until the factories and utility property figures are compiled.

Within a few weeks, Auditor Thomas hopes to have final figures on the reappraisement, showing the value of all realty property in the city and county for taxation purposes.

Any owner of real property outside the city is invited to visit the auditor's office to find out the official valuation figure placed on his property The figures have been approved by the county board of revision, made up of Auditor Thomas, Treasurer R. G. Smallwood and O W. Kinnamon, chairman of the board of county commissioners This board has checked over valuation figures determined by appraisers.

Bucyrus Police Chase Quartet After Safes in Business Places Are Looted.

Special to The Star

BUCYRUS, Oct 13 — Bucyrus police today were attempting to connect the escape of four persons after a chase south of town with the burglary of two business places early this morning

Two men and two women drove their car into a field and escaped when a police car headed them on the Marion road three miles south of here The chase started in Bucyrus and ended after the police car blocked the road ahead of them. The quartet in the fleeing machine drove into a lane to avoid capture

Safes at the Ohio Farmers' Milk Co and the Ulmer Electric Co were broken into early this morning The burglars got $24 15 from the milk company but the loot taken from the other place has not been ascertained

FIGURES SHOW "BUSY BEE" IS WELL NAMED

Travels Many Thousand Miles To Gather Pound of Honey.

By International News Service.

ST LOUIS, Mo—Bees fly a distance equivalent to two or three times around the earth—30,000 to 75,000 miles—to gather enough honey to fill a 1-pound square, such as is sold in grocery stores for 25 cents, Dr. William C Wilson said recently.

"Bees will sometimes fly as much as six to eight miles to get one drop of nectar," added Dr Wilson, who has approximately 6,000,000 bees working on three farms near here

"A good queen bee is one of nature's most efficient laboratories for converting food into life. At her best she will lay from 1900 to 2400 eggs a day She will keep it up for twenty or thirty days without a rest.

"That is a rate of 100 eggs per hour, day and night, for about a month The eggs deposited in twenty-four hours will weigh more than the queen Imagine a 5-pound hen laying forty-five eggs, about five pounds, within a twenty-four hour period"

Contrary to general belief, the saying "busy as a bee" is not true, according to Dr Wilson "Of necessity they are idle much of the time. They can work only when there is nectar in the blooms But what they teach so graphically is that 'many a mickle make a muckle,' as the Scotch have it. They do wonders with concentrated effort," the apiarist said

Scientist Sees End of Earth, But Not Soon

By United Press

OXFORD, England.—Sir Francis Younghusband believes that the universe is running down and that in time the human race will be faced with extinction through lack of heat.

He said recently "In a certain number of thousand of millions of years the sun will have radiated away its heat. This earth will become unfit for human, or any other living habitation. And all life and love and duty, and every other lovely thing for which we have most urgently striven, will have vanished as a light extinguished."

Commenting on the slowing up of the universe Younghusband said: "The universe is running down, we are told by astronomers. The second law of thermo-dynamics is their god None can dispute it. It lays down that heat radiated away is never recovered

"Slowly but surely and inevitably the heat of the sun and all those other suns, the stars will be radiated away There will be one vast heat death."

Sir Francis believes there may be some hope for recovery from this approaching disaster "In the deep recesses of space," said Sir Francis "under conditions as yet unknown radiation may be reconstituted matter may be reborn"

HIGHWAYS PROVIDE HELP FOR JOBLESS

Work in That Branch Increased 150 Per Cent, Records Show.

By United Press

WASHINGTON — Emergency work on state and federal highway projects increased employment in such work by more than 150 per cent in seven months according to Thomas H. MacDonald chief of the bureau of public roads of the department of agriculture

Discussing the $80,000,000 advance fund made available last December by congress MacDonald said that within five months the fund, together with $160,000 000 regular federal aid and state funds, had been put to work on new projects The states also continued construction and maintenance programs from state funds

July 1 according to MacDonald, the total active federal aid program, including emergency and state funds, amounted to about $447,500 000

"Starting with a total of 148 600 employed on the state and federal highway programs in January," he said, "there was a rapid increase as weather conditions permitted In May the total passed 300 000, for July it was 365,000, and the August preliminary figure was 384,000."

MacDonald pointed out, however, that these figures did not represent the sum total of labor stimulation growing out of the emergency work. The road dollar, he said, "spreads back through stone quarries, sand and gravel plants, cement factories, petroleum fields and refineries, mines, engages rail and water transportation facilities, and keeps the wheels of equipment and accessory factories turning."

WHEN YOU COOK ELECTRICALLY

you cook with heat, not with fire

CLEANLINESS is the outcome in those homes where electric ranges do the cooking. There is no smoke nor soot to blacken the walls because there is no flame to cause dirt. Best of all, pots and pans will remain spotless and shining.

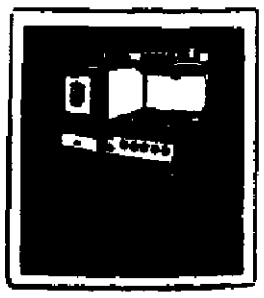
Electric heat is clean heat

COMFORT is the reward of wise housewives who have learned how readily electricity shoulders their cooking tasks. The electric range regulates the cooking so perfectly and automatically that it almost seems to think.

Electric cooking saves time

ECONOMY will result from the wise use of a modern electric range. The actual operating cost, in view of the advantages and conveniences, is surprisingly low. Moreover, the insulated oven will hold cooking heat long after the current has been turned off.

Electric heat is cheap



A reasonable down payment will install an electric range in your kitchen. You may make the remaining payments while it works and saves for you.

The history goes back to the spring of this year.

The father, a man, who had risen above his childhood surroundings and had become a respected citizen whose friends looked up to him as a leader in his neighborhood, was thrown out of work this spring. He had been boss of a gang of men, and had been earning good money, enough to start buying his small home and putting a little aside in a bank each week.

From time to time afterwards he was able to get odd jobs, and provide plain food for his family.

Utterly discouraged, broken in spirit, the father took to drink as a way out of his misery. One Saturday night the mother and her children sat at home, waiting for him to come with his small pittance for a job done that day.

The father came home, said nothing to his wife or children, went upstairs and when he came down, walked out of the house—and out of their lives, for they have never seen him since that day this spring.

One of the girls, old enough to understand the life which faced them, and with not enough to eat to keep her spirit up, worried herself into a state of illness which demanded medical attention. There was no money for a doctor and the girl was taken to the free clinic. Three weeks ago, a boy was born to the mother, and with no money coming into the home, and a few cents a day going out for food, she is worried to a state of desperation. No word has come to her of the whereabouts of her husband, and before her is the thought that he may be one of many unidentified men who have been killed hopping freight trains from one city to another.

LABORER HELD FOR 4 DEATHS

Maryland Family Brutally Slain by Discharged Farm Worker.

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, Md., Oct. 13—A 60-year-old Negro, Orphan Jones, was held today for the shotgun and ax murder of a farm family of four—Green Davis, his wife, and their two daughters.

Jones had worked for Davis for three weeks up to Saturday night. At that time the men quarreled. Jones was discharged.

The body of Davis, 55 years old, was found yesterday in bed beside that of his wife, Iva, 45.

Bodies of the two girls—Elizabeth, 15, and Mary Lee, 13—both high school students, were in a bed in an adjoining room.

Shotgun slugs had been fired into the bodies and the killer had bludgeoned his victims unmercifully with an ax.

Pieces of burnt cloth were under the beds, indicating an attempt to fire the house; and the bodies had been saturated with coal oil.

The Negro, a native of Virginia, was arrested last night at Ocean City. In his clothing police said they found a pocketbook and other property identified as belonging to members of the Davis family.

As a crowd of several hundred gathered at the Davis home authorities rushed the Negro to the county jail at Snow Hill, 16 miles from here for safe keeping. The crowd was dispersed and there was no disorder.

Jones was an itinerant farm laborer and worked for Davis for three weeks.

Martha Harmon, 50, a Negro woman at Ocean City, told police she was awakened early Sunday morning by a noise and saw Jones standing on the front porch cleaning an automatic shotgun. The gun, later recovered by police, was identified as property of the dead farmer.

BULKLEY WINDS UP FARM TOUR

By The Associated Press

BELLEFONTAINE, O., Oct. 13—Three hundred farmers of this area last night described their troubles to United States Senator Robert J. Bulkley, and voted that the farm board's stabilization policy had been successful. The meeting closed Bulkley's tour of agricultural communities, in which he listened to the farmers rather than addressing them.

A majority of the farmers favored the farm board's cooperative plan but disapproved the debenture plan and the equalization fee. Most of his other meetings had ended in similar decisions, Bulkley said.

water or steam is useless, or unreal, or that we need worry about transformations in matter.

The earth is solid enough now, bridges carry loads, cranes lift burdens, man rules his grain of sand in the universe. Time enough to worry millions of years hence, and by that time we shall probably be elsewhere in the universe.

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW, unlike good wine, does not age well. In a jeering mood, addressing Americans he predicts we shall one day erect a statue to Lenin, and adds: "Your President, who became famous by feeding devastated Europe in war, cannot feed his own people in time of peace."

Even Mr. Shaw should know that our President is not supposed to feed "his people." They feed themselves and will continue doing so.

Mr. Shaw, rejoicing in what he calls Russia's prosperity, discovers that "God is well pleased with Russia, while his wrath is heavy on us."

Russia has done wonders thus far with her plan by working hard, talking little, unlike Shaw. But her people still live on black bread and bean soup, while revolutionary enthusiasm carries them along.

All nations hope, selfishly, that Russia will succeed in her effort to become a great industrial nation. Anarchy among 150,000,000 that would follow failure of the Russian plan would be sad for all civilization.

DR. J. M. POWIS SMITH and Dr. Edgar Goodspeed of the University of Chicago are rewriting the Bible into an American version. The Lord's prayer will start: "Our Father in heaven, Your name be revered. Your kingdom come. Your will be done on earth as it is done in heaven. Give us today bread for today," etc., etc.

This does not seem an improvement—it reminds you of the good clergyman who began his prayer familiarly:

"O Lord, as Thou has doubtless seen in the morning papers."

MUKDEN WARLIKE

Streets Barricaded in Preparation for Hostilities.

(Copyright, 1931, by I. N. S.)

MUKDEN, Manchuria, Oct. 13—Six thousand miles removed from the scene of peace efforts at Geneva, Mukden is a theater of war.

With telegraph and cable facilities hampered and train service almost paralyzed, Mukden is in effect six times 6,000 miles away from peace. It is an armed camp. Its streets are barricaded with sand-bags. Its business is at a standstill.

I have walked through Mukden, unmolested, from its southern outskirts, through its hub and to its northernmost extremity.

I have crossed from east to west inspected the business and factory areas, which a few weeks ago throbbed with industry, and looked into the residential districts which have been changed from havens of rest and peace to streets of fear and despair.

From one extremity of the city to the other, Mukden has become a scene of war preparation. The hub of the metropolis, where on the facades of buildings and shops are seen familiar British and American names, is the most warlike of all.

Sand-bags are piled high, forming efficient barricades for the Japanese troops who patrol it with drawn rifles, glistening with fixed bayonets. Empty gasoline drums, piled on end and strengthened with sand-bags, form makeshift but bullet-worthy machine gun emplacements.

PROMINENT SOCIAL FIGURE IS STRICKEN

Former Ohio Woman, Once Leader in Washington Society, Drops Dead.

By The Associated Press

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Oct. 13 — Mrs. Alice Pike Barney, 70, playwright and patron of the theater who at one time was a colorful figure of social life at Washington, D. C., dropped dead of heart disease at a concert here last night.

The daughter of a Cincinnati theater owner and distiller, she was 17 years old when she was married to Albert Clifford Barney, banker. He died in 1914, leaving her an estate of $5,000,000. She went to Washington and established a salon that was the talk of the day.

When she was 40 she was married to Christian Hemmick, 28-year-old artist. He later obtained a divorce on grounds of desertion.

Mrs. Barney and her daughter Natalie startled Washington on several occasions. The mother executed a nude, reclining statue of the daughter and it appeared one day on the lawn of the Barney home. Police insisted that it be covered with a tarpaulin until it could be removed.

MISS CRANER MAY BE BROUGHT HOME

NEW SOLUTION TO "BLIMP" MYSTERY

By International News Service

GALLIPOLIS, O., Oct. 13—An enormous flock of blackbirds flying in cigar-like formation that would give the appearance of a blimp was the latest theory set forth today as a solution of the mystery of the phantom dirigible which was reported to have fallen in flames last Saturday afternoon near here. A flock of blackbirds, it was said, could have settled downward into a valley in such a way as to give the appearance of a collapsing airship.

Reports of the fallen blimp caused a widespread flurry of excitement around here. Searching parties scoured the district from both land and air but failed to find any trace of a wrecked airship.

those she occupied for a decade while relatives wondered what had happened to her. Mrs. Wood remains inconsolable. Mrs. Shields said her grandmother tries to soothe herself by smoking cigars, explaining that they always soothed her husband and might help her. Her husband was owner of the old New York News.

Mrs. Shields said that at the court hearing she would demand to see Mrs. Wood whenever she wants to, "regardless of Otis Wood's wishes."

"I shall also oppose Otis Wood's remaining as guardian. Mrs. Wood does not like him. And when I saw her Saturday, there were bruises on her body, fresh bruises."

Denied by Attorney

An attorney for Wood said: "It is absolutely untrue that Mrs. Wood was injured in the slightest when she was moved from one apartment to another at the hotel. Mrs. Wood was wrapped in a blanket and carried very gently. She has the vitality of a woman 45. Her property and health are being conserved."

Wood and three other nephews represent one group of Mrs. Wood's kinsmen. Mrs. Shields and Miss Emma Wood represent the opposing group. It was explained that they are grandchildren, not of Mrs. Wood, but of her husband by a previous marriage.

DEFENSE SCORES IN POISON TRIAL

By The Associated Press

LEBANON, Ind., Oct. 13—Further evidence on the poison deaths of Alice Jean and Virginia Simmons was sought by the state today from Dr. Rollo N. Harger, state toxicologist and witness in the murder trial of their mother, Mrs. Carrie Simmons.

Dr. Harger, who made an examination of contents of the little girls' vital organs after their deaths last June 21, began his testimony late yesterday, after a two and a half hour wrangle among attorneys over admissibility of certain evidence he was prepared to give.

The defense won a ruling by Judge John W. Hornaday against admission of any evidence of any poison except that named in the indictment charging Mrs. Simmons with murder of Alice Jean, age 10 with murder of Alice Jean, age 10 younger of the girls, who died after eating chicken sandwiches at a family reunion picnic here. The mother, who prepared the sandwiches, is charged with inserting poison filled capsules in them.

DEPUTY KIDNAPED

Two Minnesota Motorists Flee with Captive; Posse in Pursuit

By United Press

SHAKOPEE, Minn., Oct. 13 — Two motorists kidnaped Deputy Sheriff Lester Brown today and fled with him toward the twin cities while Sheriff Joseph C. Weckman organized a posse and started in pursuit.

The abductors were believed to have made away with Brown because his presence thwarted plans to rob the First National bank. The pair had been loitering in town for two hours. Brown had remained nearby, watching them.

Finally the pair called Brown to their automobile and asked a few questions, then pulled him into the machine and sped away, while witnesses notified Sheriff Weckman and joined the posse.

The Stars Say—

For Wednesday, Oct. 14

BY GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

THE planetary configurations in strongest force on this day must be interpreted as adverse in the trend of daily affairs, although there may be the usual compensations in social, domestic or romantic affiliations or activities. The latter may be conspicuous for a particularly happy attachment or adventure. Mental depressions and distorted outlook on affairs should be banished, although precaution should be taken in employment, in signing papers and against gullibles.

If It's Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a year in which the happiest experiences may be found in the realm of the domestic, social and affectional relations, as business and employment may prove laggard. Be careful with writings and guard against duplicity. Likewise banish mental depressions and distortions. A child born on this day may be genial, popular and friendly despite distorted views and gloomy introspections. It should be given an optimistic outlook on life.

Squared Away.

Japan and China are squared away, prepared to start fighting at the drop of the hat, if necessary. If nothing intervenes, "China will not hesitate to make the supreme sacrifice —bankrupt the country for half a century and go to war to uphold the sanctity of international agreements and safeguard the peace of the world," warns its president. What a bitterly familiar ring his words have!

The United States, which is not a member of the League of Nations, is exerting all the power at its command to augment the league's influence to effect a peaceful settlement of the differences between the two nations. There will be no war between Japan and China, if the existing machinery of peace is powerful enough to prevent it. There is, first of all, the league covenant. In addition, there is the pact of Paris. Standing back of them is the peace sentiment of the civilized world, including Japan and China. If these forces are of no avail, if the wishes of prominent Japanese and Chinese statesmen are of no avail, there will be war, just as there always has been war when two nations were squared away ready to fight.

The United States is closer to the League of Nations now than it has been since Woodrow Wilson, the idealist, lost his fight to make this nation a member. It is working in actual partnership with the league to bring about, if possible, performance of that organization's most important function—prevention of war. At the same time, the United States was never further from becoming a member of the league, because it is demonstrating graphically that it has greater influence as a partner of the league than it would have as a member.

There is an atmosphere of tensity surrounding international relations that never has existed before. In 1914 the tendency was to minimize the results of an imminent war; the tendency today is to exaggerate them. The civilized world is frightened sick at the prospect of a long conflict between Japan and China, and the possibility that other nations, too, might become involved. If it be possible to avert trouble by taxing the doubtful strength of the peace machinery now in existence, there will be no war. If not, then trouble will be added and agitation for peace will be a hollow mockery of man's permanent weaknesses, one of which is arrogant national pride.

Senator Johnson, of California, criticizes President Hoover's proposed moratorium of international debts, holding that, if put into execution, it will lead to cancellation and the protection of private loans by bankers to Germany. But then, it's always possible that "Uncle Hiram's" real objection is less to the plan than to its author.

Laval, Then Grandi.

Dino Grandi, Italy's able foreign minister, is the fortunate possessor of a winning smile. That smile, which is his expression in the photograph commonly used by United States newspapers, has done more to make friends for him and the current Italian government than any other single thing that has been done, or that could have been done.

Smiling Minister Grandi will visit the United States in November, it is announced. His visit will follow that of Premier Laval, representing the French government. A German representative may come to this country later, depending on the outcome of the Laval visit. The United States may not attract tourists from abroad, but it gets the dignitaries. It is right that its citizens should recognize, with fitting modesty, that their nation occupies a position of unequaled international importance.

Disarmament, intergovernmental debts and economic revival probably will be the topics of discussion between Minister Grandi and President Hoover and Secretary Stimson. Italy, charged with encouraging a militaristic spirit, has shown, nevertheless, a strong desire for international agreement on arms limitation. If the United States can extract promises from both France and Italy to sacrifice armament for the general economic welfare, it will have formed a powerful disarmament bloc in the coming arms reduction parley.

Dino Grandi, of the smiling face, is assured of a hearty public reception in the United States. Let someone estimate the value that statesmen's visible personalities are coming to have in these days when they go to see each other, instead of standing off at long distance and writing polite notes. First, will come Laval, a quiet unassuming man who encourages confidence; then Grandi, a smiling, frank man. The United States anticipates their visits with equal pleasure.

Frank W. Grace, at fourteen call boy at Denison, Texas, for the Missouri-Kansas-Texas railroad, was recently elected at fifty-one to be chairman of the board and president of the road. Opportunity still knocks in this great land of ours, but the boys who put in their time burning gasoline while chasing about in their fathers' cars do not often hear it.

Police Troubles.

President Hoover told the International Association of Chiefs of Police, in convention at St. Petersburg, Florida, Monday morning, that "instead of the glorification of cowardly gangsters we need the glorification of policemen who do their duty and give their lives in public protection." In an address employing the word "it" liberally, the President sketched the desirable position a community's police force should occupy.

It is difficult to agree with Mr. Hoover that the public needs to "glorify" policemen instead of "cowardly gangsters." He wrongly assumes that the public "glorifies" gangsters. That is not so. A small portion of the public "glorifies" gangsters, but it is a portion which never could be persuaded to be interested in any other type of human being. The majority of the public is interested in the gangster chiefly as the symbol of a brazen threat to the proper functioning of social protection and order. If this majority seems to "glorify" the criminal by paying considerable attention to him, its motives are interpreted wrongly.

Furthermore, Mr. Hoover shoots wide of the mark in his assertion that the public needs "the glorification of policemen." The public always has been, and always will be, willing to recognize merit in a policeman, but it will fight shy, in the long run, of "glorification." There is general realization that the police have a hard job, made harder by numerous opportunities for policemen to add to their modest incomes by grafting. Because the difficulty of maintaining efficient police power under such conditions is realized, society in general has not been quick to blame the police for their mistakes and weaknesses. The police will do better when the communities employing them do better, is the feeling. "Glorification" isn't concerned in the least. Quiet efficiency of the kind that keeps situations from getting so tense that there is a call for heroes is the ideal.

President Hoover described things as they should be in one paragraph of his address, when he said: "If the police had the vigilant, universal backing of public opinion in their communities, if they had the implacable support of the prosecuting authorities and the courts, if our criminal laws in their endeavor to protect the innocent did not furnish loopholes, through which irresponsible, yet clever, criminal lawyers daily find devices of escape for the guilty, I am convinced that our police would stamp out the excessive crime and remove the worldwide disrepute which has disgraced some of our great cities."

That was a very fair summing up of the troubles of the police power by Mr. Hoover. They aren't the product of lack of glorification. They are, to use the President's own phrase of a few years ago, the product of a general breakdown in respect for law and order.

Daniel Chester French.

Americans are slow to respond to the graphic arts, but there are evidences of an increasing appreciation. Daniel Chester French, who died last week, felt that way about his countrymen. Many of them do not know that he was, perhaps, their greatest sculptor. Like so many great artists he will be better known to future generations than to his own. His permanent fame is secure; his contemporary fame is fleeting.

Mr. French's best-known statue is the one of Abraham Lincoln in the Lincoln memorial at Washington. Thousands of visitors to the capital admire its force, but few of them appreciate the genius that conceived and executed it. The genius has passed, but the statue will live on as long as imperishable marble can withstand the buffeting of time.

His greatest achievement, in the opinions of many, is "Death and the Sculptor," in Forest Hills cemetery, near Boston. He first gained fame with "The Minute Man," commemorating the battle of Concord. He was in his early twenties then, and remained productively active until a short time before his death, at the age of eighty-one. He was an indefatigable worker, and a complete list of the work he produced challenges credulity. It hardly seems possible that one man could do so many difficult things well.

There are evidences of an increasing appreciation, Mr. French believed. They are slow to come, but when finally they are numerous enough to indicate that Americans really are beginning to understand that the artist deserves honor equal to that of the politician and the business executive, the name of Daniel Chester French will mean more than it does to the people of his own generation.

The Autumn Yarn.

Every summer brings its collection of animal stories. When things get dull there is always an imaginative newspaper correspondent somewhere who can fill his pipe and pound out a yarn that will get attention. "Trained fish recovers golf balls lost in water hazard for master;" "Bulldog raises family of ducks;" "Carrier pigeon hurts wing and walks 200 miles to get home;" and, of course, there's always something about snakes. Last summer, it was a puzzled python or a bucolic boa constrictor parading as a dragon in Lake Erie, it will be recalled.

Autumn has its stock yarn too, a little less exciting but none the less imaginative. It's the prediction for winter—the tell-tale signs nature leaves around that tell the whole story to wise farmers. There are, for instance, corn husks, fur, the nut crop, rings on the caterpillar, the muskrat house, animals, and each with a story to tell. But the story, strangely enough, is so often the same. It's always going to be a hard winter. Nature says so. And the farmers are right half the time. If they stick to one story long enough, so no harm's done.

The first one of the season happens to come from Chardon, this state's conservatory of the pioneer spirit. Muskrat houses are thicker, corn husks heavier, fur is heavier, there is a heavy nut crop—and no doubt it will be a hard winter. That, apparently, settles it, unless, of course, some one has read nature's book differently and wants to deny it.

"Ned Buntline" as an Ohio Man.

BY J. H. GALBRAITH.

Edward C. Judson, the first to become famous and wealthy by writing such flashy fiction as came later to be known as the "dime novel" sort, struck his stride in that venture as a citizen of Ohio. Coming to Ohio in 1844, he joined L. A. Hine in the conduct of "The Western Literary Journal and Monthly Magazine" in Cincinnati, which carried editorials and literary articles from Judson that came to be much admired by the lovers of flashy literature. While in Cincinnati he brought out what was regarded as his early masterpiece, which was entitled "Mysteries and Miseries of New York," of which 100,000 copies were sold, making it easily the best seller of its kind and time. He is said to have received in one year as much as $120,000, and later on, when he settled down in New York as the publisher of a periodical conveying his literary output of this kind to readers, his steady income is said to have been about $20,000 a year, a very large sum for a writer's earnings at that time.

He was born in Philadelphia in 1822, the son of a lawyer who planned to educate him for the law, but while a boy he ran away from home and went to sea as a cabin boy. Martin Van Buren appointed him a midshipman in the navy, but he fought seven duels in rapid succession with other midshipmen who refused to mess with him and left the navy. Later he was government scout among the western Indians, serving with the rank of colonel. Here he gathered a store of experiences to be used later in western stories. His first efforts were printed in the Knickerbocker magazine. With this success he came to Cincinnati and soon found himself a popular writer.

Leaving Cincinnati in 1848, he went to New York and established a magazine which he called "Ned Buntline's Own." This was a nom de plume he had adopted in Cincinnati. The next year he was arrested for inciting the Astor Place riot through the columns of his publication and, being convicted, was given a year's imprisonment and fined $250. He was a frequent lecturer on temperance and an ardent Republican campaign orator. He died at Stamford, New York, in 1886.

Editorial Opinion.

THE SOUTH PITIES THE NORTH.

It seems clear that science has gone entirely too far. This thing of disturbing the air with airships and with radios that broadcast love songs, crooning, and hot-air addresses of all sorts, is bad enough, but when the sacred stratosphere is invaded and traffic lines through it are suggested, the weather gods rightly are indignant. The result is that for the last twelve months erratic storms, heat waves, earthquakes and similar evils are becoming too common in certain parts of the United States and Europe. It is time to call a halt and abolish further scientific inventions.

The South, fortunately, is not given to science, being in the fundamental belt, and consequently has been favored with warm winters and cool summers. It looks with deep commiseration on the high thermometers of the North and the intense suffering from heat waves and drought, but realizes that that section has brought this suffering on itself by devotion to science and pandering to inventions. Let it abandon science and evolutionary teachings, join the rubes and eschew tariffs. Then, like the Sunny South, it may have moderate temperatures and exhilarating breezes from the sea and ice-covered mountain ranges.

Yoke up the oxen onto the emigrant wagon and move South. It is the land of perpetual spring, with fresh vegetables and fruit all the year around. Come to Texas to cool off, dip into the Gulf of Mexico and wash away the effilements of the heated North. Watermelons are in season.—Dallas News.

NO VESTAL FIRE WANTED IN FRANCE.

A tiny gas jet, where patrons may light their cigarets or pipes, burns all day in the cafes of France without paying a cent of tribute to the government. If the convenience were not available the smoker would have to strike a match or snap his automatic lighter, both of which are taxed, and he would thus contribute his mite to the national coffers. Those whose professional duty is to note every escape from the country's opportunity to obtain revenue have called attention to this loss of official income. But apparently nothing can be done about it.

Perhaps France views with dismay any perpetual flame such as was maintained in days when fires on the altar in the temple of Vesta were never allowed to die out. In early times there was a necessity for keeping them alight. Primitive man found it difficult to kindle the fuel for cooking his frugal meal. He may have known the American Indian trick of rubbing two sticks together, a practice in which Boy Scouts today become proficient, but ignition did not come readily. Now that friction is easily produced and France has made capital of the possibilities, she frowns on any desire to see traditions of the past kept alive.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Will Help Baby, Too.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Father is always talking about his "need of exercise." Have you ever thought about your baby's need of exercise?

Every baby should be encouraged to take exercise. It is just as necessary for it as it is for the grown-ups, and especially so if the baby is inclined to be fat.

The new baby moves about very little. It devotes itself to eating and sleeping. But before many weeks it begins to kick and toss its arms about. The clothing and coverings should be kept loose enough to permit free muscular action.

The young mother will never forget, of course, that a tiny baby is a delicate morsel of humanity. For this reason, in taking it up, the child should not be grasped by the chest under the arms. This is a very crude method.

The best way is first to lift the lower part of the body by the clothing. Then slip the hands under the back and the head. In this way the body and head are supported, and accidents are guarded against.

The simpler the baby's dress the better. Have the clothes loose, as I have said, so that there can be freedom of movement.

When it is warm enough let the baby lie without clothing on a blanket spread on the grass or in the room. Then it will have a glorious time with its kicking and squirming. This is as good as a gymnasium for its physical training. Let the baby roll and kick and sprawl to its heart's content.

After the child is several months old, it can be propped up with extra pillows supporting the back and sides. Little by little every muscle of the body will grow strong and it won't be long before baby is supporting its own body.

Don't treat the little baby as though it were made of wax and would break. Handle it with a combination of firmness and gentleness.

Have you ever studied the actions of young animals—puppies, kittens, birds or chickens? If you have you will find that they begin action very early. The parents even push the young birds out of the nest when they know the youngsters are ready to fly and take care of themselves.

Instinct and self-preservation are powerful influences. Even the small baby knows enough to kick and squirm if given the chance. It glories in its liberty, and will smile, and gurgle and coo with delight. The infant is grateful for the freedom given it.

As the baby grows older, care must be taken not to bounce or toss it about, as so many people are apt to do. To do this causes great strain on the little muscles.—Copyright, 1931, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

United States navy scientists have developed a method for photographing steel for the detection of defects by the use of radium in instances where it would be difficult to use X-rays.

Science and Crime Reduction.

BY ARCHIBALD HENDERSON.

The future age is to be an age of science. It is a mistake to call this the age of science; for in the larger affairs of social justice, universal education and human solidarity, we have only just begun to utilize the findings of science. One of the first things we are discovering is that science, in its completeness, thoroughness and detail, is laborious and expensive in application. Just as it takes years to learn enough basic science to acquire facility in research, so it takes years to apply adequately, scientific procedure and discipline to the larger social problems.

Consider, for example, the problem of the rehabilitation of criminals. There is virtue in the effort to restore men, who have broken the laws of the land, to civil life and give them an opportunity to live worthy, law-abiding lives. The great problem is: how is it to be done? How are we to obtain the elaborate data requisite for judging the effects and results of his promising humanitarian experiment? How are the large sums necessary to effect this rehabilitation to be obtained? Will it pay the state to carry out these experiments on a large scale?

A most interesting and promising beginning has been made in this line by Hinton G. Clabaugh, chairman of the parole board of Illinois. As narrated by Mayer and Howe, in "Steps in the Dark," it makes a most inspiring story. It is one of those steps in the dark which clearly leads toward the light.

Clabaugh, who had devoted his life to the rehabilitation of criminals, decided to call applied science to his aid. At his request, to the institutions concerned, three men were appointed by the president in each case: Andrew S. Bruce, of Northwestern university; Albert J. Harno, of the University of Illinois, and Ernest W. Burgess, of the University of Chicago. This committee made a year's survey of the five penal and reformatory institutions in Illinois, together with a thorough analysis of criminal records, and, when available, the life records of 3,000 men who had been paroled.

The findings were extremely interesting. It was discovered that parole had proved appreciably beneficial to society by transforming bad men into good. The principal handicap is always lack of useful and authentic information. The scientists concentrated upon twenty-one phases of the man's life-history, his social background, his personality type, his criminal and prison career. It was shown that seventy-five per cent. of the 3,000 "made good"—i. e. did not violate their parole. Out of this seventy-five per cent. ten per cent. later on were apprehended for new offenses. The parole system proved to be sixty-five per cent. efficient. —Copyright, 1931, International Features Service, Inc.

Ruins of Mesa Verde.

BY TEMPLE MANNING.

The new national park in Colorado includes the ancient homes of the cliff-dwellers of Mesa Verde. These strange buildings are as startling in their way as the Grand canyon or Niagara falls.

Experts have declared that the "Cliff" palace is one of the most astounding architectural feats ever accomplished by the primitives of the southwestern United States. This old community house stands about a hundred feet above the floor of Cliff Canyon and is 300 feet under an enormous rock ledge. Of course, many of the houses have long since crumbled into dust, but the buildings that remain are splendid examples of masonry of prehistoric times.

Those who believe that the skyscraper is a modern thing will be amazed on visiting this old cliff city to find buildings at Mesa Verde that reach almost to the great ledge that tops the Cliff palace.

Then there is the famous "Spruce Tree" house, which consists mostly of foundations. This house was three stories high and once was the habitation of 350 primitives.

Archaeologists have declared that the aborigines of this cliff city had night clubs and cabarets, but differed from similar modern resorts not only in having tom-tom music instead of the saxophone, but also because no women were admitted.

Another picturesque ruin is the "Balcony" house. This was protected by the most solid masonry and could be reached only through a narrow rock cleft. A handful of warriors, it is believed, could have held this fort against a powerful force of enemies.

Thousands of Americans who are seeing their own country first have visited Mesa Verde this year. Incidentally, in the surrounding country there are to be found many other cliff dwelling ruins.

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. McINTYRE.

New York, Oct. 18—During a season when the theater was drooping toward what Wall Street calls "default levels," one actor stepped out and made record-breaking stage history. His was the most astonishing box office draw the Rialto has known in years.

The comedian turning the trick was Lou Holz, thin young dialect comic discovered originally by Elsie Janis singing in a roadhouse near San Francisco. He was urged to try his luck in New York and did. But outside a few revue and vaudeville engagements met indifferent success.

In fact he met greater success dabbling in the market, running a small investment into a sizable fortune which included an uptown apartment house. Save for an occasional engagement now and then, he had about deserted the stage when Wall Street blew up and he lost everything.

Bewildered and disheartened he went on at the Palace as a master of ceremony and it was his acute indifference and effortless fun-making that put him over. He was held and managed to find backers for a musical comedy that lasted several months.

After this show closed he went back to the Palace, again as master of ceremony, to accomplish the most extraordinary run in the history of that playhouse. For the first time the entire bill including Holz was retained intact for the second week.

Then, with minor changes due to prior engagements, went into the third, fourth and even seventh week. Thus did a hastily collected vaudeville bill become virtually a summer revue. It was Holz, with the aid of William Gaxton, who kept the show together and packed the house twice daily.

His salary, starting at $4,250 a week, ballooned to $6,500, one of the largest ever paid at the Palace. As a result Holz becomes the most sought after actor on Broadway. But what is more impressive is the un-actory reaction of Holz to his triumph. His hat fits him still.

Another fine performer who ran Holz a close race on the Palace bill was William Gaxton. He remained all during the Holz run and two weeks afterward. And if ever one puts over a song with more contagious zip, I've never heard him. I attended one show a dozen times just to hear him sing "You Do Something to Me." Chevalier, my eye!

Incidentally, passing what was once a vaudeville haven—Proctor's Fifth Avenue, likely so named because it's on lower Broadway—I found it had, like many other theaters uptown, turned to rowdy continuous burlesque and the lobby once displaying pictures of Jack Norworth and Nora Bayes, Blossom Seeley, et al, now bristles with shocking photos of startlingly nude ladies.

I am told most burlesque ladies of the moment come from the lower east side—chiefly the Ghetto. They are usually dark-skinned brunettes with bright cheery lips, although in the undressing numbers a blonde is the central figure. It is difficult work, as the shows are continuous, running from noon until midnight. Salaries range from $40 to $60 a week, with principals getting $75 to $125 top.

The comis are even rowdier than those of other days, although the comedy is still largely confined to unmerciful whanging of what Mr. Mencken calls the sitzplatz. In all the bufoonery and hay-loft hilarity of burlesque, however, there is something typically American—as typical, indeed, as the paw-paw or the seventh inning stretch. There is a camaraderie about the unexpected squirt of seltzer in the face of a surprised innocent that makes all brothers, perhaps more so than a treaty in a mirrored hall at Versailles.

Back stage at a burlesque house a skimpily clad lady told me she was upset. She had just refused to share her dressing room with a best friend. "She has simply become," she explained, "a kleptomaniac on stealing."

* * *

There is something vigorously expressive about burlesque patois. A frizzly-red-head wiggle dancer came into the wings puffing as the house roared with applause. Called back for a half dozen bows, a girl friend, passing, called: "Kid, that's selling a number! You certainly spit Ritz."—Copyright, 1931, McNaught Syndicate, Inc.

A Washington Daybook.

BY HERBERT PLUMMER.

Washington, Oct. 18 — When that Berlin mother the other day named her son, Hoover, out of gratitude to the President of the United States for suggesting a moratorium on war debts, she was doing nothing particularly novel.

From the time of the first president, it has been more or less "the thing."

President Hoover's love of children and his interest in their welfare is one of the outstanding traits of the man. But he of few other men have a greater love for them than did George Washington.

Washington had no children of his own, but he never overlooked an opportunity to perform some kind act for the children of others with whom he came in contact.

* * *

It would be interesting to know if President Hoover has acknowledged or will acknowledge his namesake in Berlin. There have been others—in this country—to be given his name since he became president. What he has done in regard to them, I have been unable to learn.

But Washington was always quick to act.

Once while making a presidential tour of New England, he chanced to spend the night at a private house. There he learned that one of the sons bore his name and one of the daughters that of Mrs. Washington.

At his next stopping place, he penned the following letter:

"Being informed that you have given my name to one of your sons, and called another after Mrs. Washington's family, and being very much pleased with the modest and innocent looks of your two daughters, I do for these reasons send each of the girls a piece of cloth.

"To Patty, who bears the name of Mrs. Washington * * * I send five guineas, with which she may buy herself any little ornaments she may want. * * *"

But Washington, too, was modest, for he added:

"As I do not give these things with a view to have it talked of, or even of its being known the less there is said about the matter the better you will please me. * * *"

Incidentally, there is another famous American—General Pershing—who has had babies named for him in all parts of the world.

The general keeps a careful list of the birth days of his namesakes, and makes sure that on the anniversary of each some kind of greeting is sent them.

Dinner Stories.

Mother—"Prayers, darling, are little messages to God."

Youngster—"Oh, and we send them at night to get the cheaper rate?"

other radio fans hear only the result of the performance.

Taking an old phonograph cabinet, Burrey placed a seven-tube radio in it with the television apparatus in the upper compartment.

Television sounds like a very complicated process, and, indeed, the details of it are difficult to understand. The fundamentals of it, however, are comparatively simple. According to Burrey's explanation, the television image is sent from the sending station in a process not unlike broadcasting with a resemblance to motion picture filming thrown in. This comes over the air to the receiving set where it is amplified and sent to a neon tube with a disk revolving 1,200 times a second in front of it. This disk has 60 perforations in it, which, when revolving, bring together the image which is seen when the viewer looks through a magnifying glass in the face of the cabinet.

The neon tube where the picture is formed consists of two plates with light traveling between them at the rate of 60,000 times a second. The process of the light covering this distance is termed a light variation.

Seen as Moving Picture

Twenty complete pictures are formed on the front plate of this tube in a second and gives a realistic moving picture of the objects in the studio.

The deception of moving pictures enters into television also, Burrey said, as at no time is the entire scene on the tube at one time and yet the eye sees a complete picture. Three perforations of the disk are in front of the tube at one time and are not sufficient to form a complete image. The disk, however, moves so rapidly that the next three perforations follow close enough to form a picture in the eye. In motion pictures, the pieces of film, each showing a separate action, pass through the camera at such a rate of speed that the result is a clear series of motions.

Burrey's television set consists of a seven tube radio, the perforated disk, the neon tube, a self-synchronizing motor to keep the disk in step with the transmitter at the sending station and a magnifying glass in the face of the cabinet which brings the image formed up to a point where it is more readily seen.

The disk of the television apparatus must at all times be in complete step with the one at the sending station in order that a clear image may be obtained. The sending station's disk also has 60 perforations and travels at the same rate of speed and the motor's duty is to keep the receiving disk synchronized with it.

Has Many Uses

All of Burrey's material has been home assembled and the disk, top of the cabinet, the coils in the radio and several other smaller items in the set are home made. The best results of his two year's work are obtained with this set, Burrey said, although he has previously built one or two sets.

The set may be adapted to several uses, including use as a public address system, regular radio and as an electric pickup for a phonograph.

Burrey receives the television pictures at night as the New York stations from which he gets the broadcasts are too distant for day visibility. The reception starts about 7 p. m. and continues until late at night. There are now more than 30 stations sending by television, an increase of five since Jan. 1, 1931.

The future of television in every home, Burrey feels, is not far distant but may require at least 10 years until the practical qualities can be worked out and the price brought down to the level of the average person.

The first important step to be worked out is a cathoderay tube which will project the images upon a screen, eliminating the necessity of looking through the glass.

Way to Get At a Cold Is Through the Bowels

As soon as you catch cold, the pores close; perspiration is checked. Gases and waste can't escape through the skin. That's why your doctor's first advice in case of colds is a mild laxative like cascara. Medical authorities agree it actually strengthens bowel muscles. You get cascara in its most pleasant form in candy Cascarets.

Remember this when you catch cold; whenever breath is bad; tongue coated; or you're headachy, bilious, constipated.

Why resort to harsher things when Cascarets activate the bowels so quickly, so harmlessly and pleasantly—and cost only a dime?—Adv.

MADE DEFENDANT IN DAMAGE SUIT

Mary Warner Sued in Municipal Court for $625

Mary Warner was made defendant in two damage suits filed in municipal court yesterday afternoon by Laura Fairchild and John Fairchild, who seek a total of $525 for alleged personal injuries and damage to an automobile received in a collision with a car driven by the defendant on Sept. 5.

Mrs. Fairchild asks $200 damages for injuries to her head, her right knee and left ankle while her husband is asking $325 for damages to his automobile.

According to the petitions, the accident occurred on the Harding highway E. when, with both cars going east, the defendant, who was in the lead, suddenly swung her car to the opposite side of the road preparatory to making a turn and then made the turn without giving warning, driving directly in the path of the Fairchild car.

Local Store Has Handled Radio Lines Here Since 1921.

Mautz Bros are probably the oldest radio dealers in Marion having added radio to their extensive hardware lines in 1921 when radio was in its infancy It has always been their policy to sell only the most reliable radio on the market. Also are very particular to give their radio customers the best service possible They are most enthusiastic about the new sets and superior results to be obtained in the new 1932 Sparton line

Several basic improvements in radio introduced by Sparton in new models are the objects of careful study by engineers

One receiving special attention from technical men is the Lafoy automatic volume control in which Sparton claims to have eliminated several serious objections which have heretofore caused difficulty The most persistent of these difficulties has been for an automatic control to respond to variations in the strength of the music as well as the strength of the station In simple words this means that if a violin were playing softly into the microphone and the music called for a sudden crash of the full orchestra there was a tendency to subdue the orchestra to violin volume This it is claimed has been overcome in the Lafoy control

The new super sonne chassis introduced by Sparton in several new models is said to so modify the standard superheterodyne circuit that the musical quality is much improved and 'background talk' practically eliminated With a careful working out of the band passing principle, of which Sparton were the pioneers it has been made possible to include everything carried on the entire broadcasting band of 10 kilocycles instead of tuning sharply to a certain point in the band This preserves the musical values as they are broadcast

Refinement in tone control have very largely reduced troubles due to static and interference in the new Sparton models By cutting off the high frequencies on bad reception nights it is said that 75 per cent of the static can be removed At the same time a 'build up of desired frequencies is brought about so that the muffled or 'stuffed' sound that has been a difficulty with many tone controls in the lower frequencies has been avoided of Columbus About Developments in Formation ommittee of 100; Predicts Success of Body; Lodge Hears Program.

success for the movement if the works as hard as committee of 32, wyer last night ad- bus day observance ion council No. 671, mbus, at the lodge rther said that the ne of Marion have d not be in vain and all efforts to carry but the suggestions received in questionnaires during the early days of the movement.

He complimented the council for being chosen as one of the 10 representative lodges and organizations of Marion and urged each member to endeavor to boost Marion in every way.

Dr. Sawyer expressed a desire to remove his own personality from the movement, saying that its only need now is a guiding hand.

Dr. Sawyer traced the early history and origin of the movement, explained and outlined the organization and purpose of the council of 100 and detailed the selection of the 10 representative clubs and organizations.

Clarence E. Silva, grand knight of the lodge, was master of ceremonies of the meeting and introduced the speakers, among whom were Rev. Father W. J. Spickerman and John J. Kelly Jr. Included in the program were a ventriloquist act by Arthur Craven, presented to a very appreciative audience, an instrumental trio and a quartet.

Father Spickerman delivered a message pertaining to the celebration of Columbus day and urged the members to be true to real history and not listen to the numerous innuendoes that are constantly being spread concerning leaders and historical figures. He urged impartiality in judging historical figures. Kelly paid a tribute to Christopher Columbus, his career, achievements and characteristics.

Members of the instrumental trio were Herman Murphy, Gene Ansbaugh and Wilbur Shultz. The quartet was composed of Frank Butterworth, first tenor; John McAndrews, second tenor; Buck Ward, baritone, and Garf Irvin, bass.

Brotherhood To Meet.

GALION, Oct. 13—The monthly meeting of the Brotherhood of the Peace Lutheran church will be held Thursday night in the parlors of the church. A program has been arranged and will include musical selections by the Brotherhood orchestra under the direction of Clint Sloane, music by an instrumental quartet, readings by Miss Juanita Pfleck and the speaker for the evening will be Kenneth Petri, Galion's youngest attorney.

"EAST OF BORNEO" OPENS AT PALACE

Exterior scenes for "East of Borneo," playing at the Palace tonight through Thursday, were made in the jungles of Sumatra and the Malay peninsula. The company was on location six months.

Rickford

Charles Bickford, after ironing out his contract difficulties with the studios, returns in this picture which also includes Rose Hobart, Georges Renavent, Lupita Tovar and Noble Johnson in the cast.

Pictures of foreign life necessitate an authority on the scene all the time, watching for the smallest details which the public might discover. Lal Chand Mehra, a high cast Hindu, born in Amritsar, India, and graduated from the University of California with degrees of B. A. and M. A. did this work for this Universal picture.

Lupita Tovar has been in films for some time, but her work has been confined to acting in Spanish versons of successful films.

"WICKED" COMING TO MARION THEATER

Elissa Landi, one of the "interesting looking" women of films, stars in "Wicked," coming to the Marion Wednesday and Thursday. Victor McLaglen is her leading man, and prominent in the cast are Una Merkel, Allan Dinehart and Theodore Von Eltz.

Miss Landi (in case you haven't heard, is the granddaughter of Empress Elizabeth of Austria, wife of Emperor Franz Josef. This was brought to life when "The Secret of An Empress" was published in 1914 in England by Cassel & Co. Ltd. A moving picture magazine printed an article, explaining the entire tangle of royal intrigue in a recent issue.

Allan Dwan, who used to be Gloria Swanson's director, handled the megaphone for this Fox picture. Mae Busch, one of the stars of yesterday, plays a role and Eileen Percy, once famous stage and screen star also has a part.
